U.S. Chamber Will Conduct Business Poll On New Deal

Vote Seen as First Step in Campaign Against Administration.

Directors Adopt Critical Report

Efforts to Usurp States' Powers, Excessive Spending Hit.

By Felix Bruner.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday decided to ask 750,000 American business men what they think of the New Deal.

At the same time, the directors adopted a report which left little doubt as to what they think of it themselves. The report, described as a factual analysis of legislative trends, held that:

There is a widespread and insistent effort on the part of the Federal Government to usurp the powers of the States.

Congress has delegated enormous and sometimes uncontrolled authority to the President.

Government expenditures are excessive.

In addition, the report recited, in a critical vein, facts concerning Government competition with business, repudiation of the gold clause in Government bonds, social security legislation, AAA regulation, and relief.

Most of the 50 directors attending the meeting agreed that business is definitely better, but at least a majority of them are reported believing that the improvement has come about in spite of, rather than because of, the New Deal.

Group Poll Planned.

The questions to be asked businessmen by the chamber have not been definitely formulated, but the questionnaire, which will go out within a week, will be accompanied by the report and by prepared arguments on both sides of the subjects about which the questions will be asked. The questions will be based on the report. They will be sent to the 1,500 local chambers of commerce and trade associations, making up the membership of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, with instructions to poll their members and to make known the results within 45 days.

The votes will be counted on the basis of organizations rather than by individuals. Small organizations have 1 vote each, and the number of votes per organization ranges upward to 10, according to membership.

The Chamber of Commerce, which at one time expressed its desire to co-operate with the Administration, has become increasingly critical. The referendum is expected to lay the groundwork for an active campaign of opposition beginning before the opening of Congress in January.

Report Adopted.

The report on legislative trends was prepared by a committee headed by John W. O'Leary, of Chicago, president of the Machine and Allied Products Industry. It contained a comprehensive review of legislation affecting business enacted in the three New Deal sessions of Congress.

Taking up first what it termed a "steady endeavor to replace with Federal jurisdiction the jurisdiction of the States over matters heretofore considered as belonging solely in the field of State and local self-government," the report declared that this trend appears and reappears in legislative enactments. It concluded that this has happened so often that it "assumes the character of a concerted policy."

"Instances of such Federal legislation," the committee said, "began in a period of emergency. In this period, as in all like periods, there was acquiescence in measures which at any other time would have been challenged. Of this acquiescence, and of the conditions which brought about this acquiescence, it now appears that advantage has been taken to consolidate a movement in Federal legislation which, with the decrease of emergency factors, is evidently being strengthened rather than moderated."

This extension of Federal powers, the committee said, has brought these other trends:

"Exercises of the spending power without regard to revenues, for purposes within the powers of neither Federal nor State Governments, and

Soviet Explains Shots Fired at Polish Balloon

Warsaw, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—The Russian ambassador visited the foreign office tonight to explain the firing upon the Polish balloon Polonia by Soviet army pilots. He said the "overzealous" pilots mistook the big gas bag for a target.

The crew of the Polonia, which landed near Stalingrad Wednesday to win the annual James Gordon Bennet Balloon Trophy, prepared to jump with parachutes when fired upon with machine guns as the balloon drifted across the Stalingrad airdrome. When they fluttered the Polish flag, firing ceased.

Kennedy Quits As SEC Chief; To Go Abroad

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Feeling that his work of establishing the Securities and Exchange Commission has been completed, Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy resigned yesterday, effective Monday, and revealed that next Wednesday he would sail for Europe on what he termed a pleasure trip.

Kennedy, however, disclosed that he proposed to have talks with the fiscal officers and central bank authorities of England, France, Holland, Germany and probably Italy regarding registration with the SEC of securities of those governments outstanding in this country.

The retiring SEC chairman disavowed any other official mission in Europe and laughed off a suggestion that perhaps he might have a hand in laying the foundation for a currency stabilization agreement.

Nevertheless, the belief prevailed here that Kennedy will sound out on the currency problem the financial authorities of the four of five European countries he visits and that his subsequent report to President Roosevelt will have an important influence on whatever moves are made in the international monetary field.

Stabilization Studied.

Even though the Government does not contemplate any definite action in the near future regarding currency stabilization, it is known that much thought is being given in high Administration quarters to a solution of that problem, evidenced specifically by the recent dispatch to Europe on fact-finding missions of Herman Oliphant, general counsel to the Treasury, and George C. Haas, chief of the Treas-

Johnson Plans Tour to Tell 'Lousy Aspects' of New Deal

Quitting WPA on Oct. 15, General Will Campaign Against Roosevelt's 'Mistakes' in Hope of 'Straightening Things Out.'

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Sharply attacking many phases of the New Deal, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson yesterday revealed plans for taking the stump as a friendly but vigorous critic of the Administration.

The general, in an interview, outlined an extended speaking-lecture tour for the frank purpose of discussing publicly the "lousy aspects of this Administration in the hope that some good will come of it."

He expects to retire as works progress administator for New York State on October 15. He will begin his tour with an address at the San Diego Exposition on October 2. Later, his engagements will take him to the Northwest, the Southwest and the Southeast. The tour will be completed about January 1.

In typically picturesque language, Johnson asserted he was actuated only by "unswerving loyalty to the President and his ideals." He believes, he said, that he could be of service by calling public attention to what he considered the Administration's mistakes.

To Discuss "Mistakes."

"I consider it my duty to discuss the lousy aspects of this Administration because everybody knows it has made mistakes and is continuing to make them," he said. "I believe it's a wholesome process on the road to straightening things out.

"And I think this is a good time to do it because the fundamental election choice next year will lie between the principles of Hooverism—which means special privilege—and those of Roosevelt, which means social privilege. Public thinking must be confined to the real issue."

He delivered a broadside against the Administration's attempt to solve the problem of returning unemployed to work through the Works Progress and Public Works Administrations; criticized its failure so far to balance the budget

Barrow Aid Convicted Of Slaying Constable

Miami, Okla., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Henry Methvin, asociate of the slain desperado couple, Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, was convicted late today of the murder of Cal Campbell, constable at Commerce, Okla. The jury recommended the death penalty.

Campbell was killed in a gun fight near Commerce, April 6, 1934, when Barrow and his companions, including the cigar-smoking Bonnie, shot their way out of a trap. Barrow and the woman were killed later in Louisiana by officers. A jury disagreed in Methvin's first trial last spring. The jury in the second trial deliberated more than 24 hours before returning the conviction.

General Strike Threat Grows In Coal Fight

Wage Negotiations Collapse With Walkout Called for Monday.

By the Associated Press.

For the sixth time in the last six months, the soft coal wage negotiations broke down last night, apparently paving the way for a possible strike next Monday morning.

A negotiating committee of two Appalachian producers and two United Mine Workers officials reported to a larger committee that they were unable to break a deadlock that started February 18 at the outset of negotiations for a new wage and hour contract.

Wages for bituminous miners throughout the country depend on the Appalachian agreement, and without that agreement spokesmen for the United Mine Workers have asserted they would order every member in the soft coal fields to stay away from work Monday.

Leaders Pessimistic.

Coal men here for the negotiations generally expressed an opinion that ysterday's appointment by President Roosevelt of a bituminous coal commission and a coal labor board under provisions of the Guffey coal stabilization act would not stop a strike.

The commission is authorized only to administer the marketing provisions of the act, while the Labor Board can handle a dispute only at the request of both sides. Even if this request were made, coal men said, the new board could not assemble and start work in time to forestall the crisis.

The miners have asked a 50-cent increase in day rates, a 10-cent increase in tonnage rates and a 15 per cent increase in yardage and deadwork. The operators offer renewal of the present scale.

Duncan Kennedy, chairman of the joint wage conference, said the committee which heard the subcommittee's reports last night would make the same report tomorrow at 10 a. m. to a committee of 56. This committee, in turn, will report to the full conference immediately.

Guffey Appointments.

Kennedy said he knew of no move for Government intervention before tomorrow. Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, asked the sub-committee yesterday to have both miners and operators explain to the public their stand at the joint conference tomorrow. McGrady told reporters he intended to talk to the conference also.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—President Roosevelt tonight named the following commission to administer the new Guffey coal stabilization act: George E. Acret, of California; Charles S. Hosford, jr., of Pennsylvania; Walter H. Maloney, of Missouri; C. E. Smith, Fairmont (W. Va.) publisher, and Percy Tetlow, of Columbus, Ohio.

The President also named the bituminous coal labor board created by the new act. These members are Lee Gunther, of Tennessee, to represent the producers; John J. O'Leary, of Pennsylvania, to represent the employes, and John M. Paris, of Indiana, to represent the public.

Blast Protesting Foreclosure Kills Woman, Hurts Children

By the Associated Press.

LaFollette, Tenn., Sept. 20.—Sheriff R. I. Davis announced the arrest this afternoon of William Righetti, and said the 60-year-old restaurant operator had confessed setting off a dynamite charge that wrecked a business building and killed Mrs. Prudie Rutherford, 37, and injured her three children here today.

The sheriff said Righetti was surrounded by officers at a mountain cabin, 4 miles from here, and surrendered without resistance, although armed with a .45-caliber pistol.

"He said he did it himself, and nobody helped him," the sheriff asserted. "He said he was getting even with them for taking his building."

The sheriff explained that Righetti operated a restaurant and beer parlor in the dynamited building and owned it until yesterday, when it was repossessed by mortgage holders.

Righetti was taken to the Campbell County Jail at Jacksboro, the sheriff said, and charged with both dynamiting the building and murder in Mrs. Rutherford's death.

Mrs. Rutherford and her children lived in an upstairs apartment. Warned by a first explosion, the children escaped, but a dynamite charge caught Mrs. Rutherford as she was running downstairs and hurled her into the wreckage. Her badly mangled body was recovered two hours later.

The children, who had reached the bottom of the steps, were knocked down and stunned. Mary, 20, suffered a sprained ankle; Nola, 12, head lacerations, and Lon, 10, bruises.

"We were all running downstairs and I looked back and saw mother and the steps going down together," Mary said.

Two other families escaped from the building without injuries.

Taxi Driver Found Slain In Maryland

By the Associated Press.

Havre De Grace, Md., Sept. 20.—Hunted since he disappeared Tuesday, the body of Albert Atwell, Baltimore taxicab driver, was found near here late today.

Magistrate J. C. Vancherie said Atwell had been shot through the head and neck and that his hands were tied behind his back with his own belt. His pockets were empty.

The body was taken to an undertaking establishment to await positive identification by Michael Dacriprete, pesonnel manager of the Diamond Cab Co., by which Atwell was employed.

Discovery of the body came after an all-day search for Atwell in the vicinity of Joppa, where his abandoned cab was found several days ago. Meanwhile, warrants were issued in Baltimore for two men suspected of holding up David Unger, driver for the same company, and dumping him in the same vicinity on the same night.

Dead About Three Days.

The body was found by E. R. Werntz, just outside Havre de Grace. He reported the discovery immediately to Chief of Police Lawrence L. Boyd.

Werntz told the officer his attention was attracted by a handkerchief about eight feet from the road along which he was walking. Investigating, he found the body in thick underbrush. There were no other clews.

Vancherie said there was no evidence indicating the body had been dragged to the spot. Lack of blood led him to believe Atwell might have been killed elsewhere, then dumped into the brush.

The magistrate said the man had been dead about three days. The magistrate and acting coroner said he would hold an inquest tomorrow night.

Cab Found Near Joppa.

A party of taxi drivers, augmented by State police, had searched for traces of Atwell all day in the vicinity of Joppa and Chase. It was there that his cab, partly burned and showing signs of having been driven hard, was found Wednesday night.

Combing a semiwasteland, the party found a bloodstained handkerchief and took them to Baltimore for identification by Atwell's wife.

Unger said two men held him up in Baltimore, forced him to drive out on the Philadelphia road and dumped him from his cab. While the men considered what should be done with him, he said, one suggested he be "bumped off" and dumped "where we dumped the other one."

Canada Frees Fliers In Koenecke's Death

Toronto, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Manslaughter charges against two Detroit fliers in the case of Len Koenecke, big-league baseball player, who was beaten to death in a dramatic fight in an airplane high above the city, were dismissed today.

Magistrate Douglas Keith ruled that William Joseph Mulqueenney and Irwin Davis, who were flying Koenecke from Detroit to Buffalo, acted in self-defense.

Immediately after their acquittal the fliers went to a hotel, where Mulqueeney's employer, E. G. Steepe, of Detroit, announced they had signed a contract with a syndicate to tell details of the fatal flight in order to cover the expenses of their trial.

Steepe said the men's future plans were uncertain, but that Mulqueeney already had decided to fly the death plane back to Detroit.

Machado Absent, U. S. Refuses to Drop Case

New York, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—A United States commissioner today refused to dismiss murder and embezzlement charges against Gerardo Machado in the absence from court of the fugitive former President of Cuba.

Commissioner G. W. Cotter held, however, that the motion might be renewed if Machado would appear in person.

Following his overthrow two years ago Machado fled to New York, later went to Santo Domingo and last was reported in Europe. The warrant for his arrest on murder charges and extradition to Cuba was issued last year, but it was not revealed until today that the former Cuban President also was wanted for alleged embezzlement of government funds.

3 Americans Released By Cuban Secret Police

Havana, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Cuban secret police released early tonight three Americans they said they had detained a few hours previously on a request by Willis George, United States Department of Justice agent.

The Cuban officials asserted George had failed to produce evidence warranting further detention of the men, named as Harry Krantz, of Miami, Zolo Strickland of Fort Myers, Fla., and Ira Miller, New York City.

War Seen Sure, U. S. to Set Up A Radio Link

Further evidence that the State Department has become convinced that hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia cannot be averted was seen yesterday in the announcement that on Wednesday four American naval radio technicians had sailed for Addis Ababa to erect an emergency radio station in order to assure continuance of communications between this government and the war zone.

The radiomen—Walter Edgar Tanner, John Luttrell Cauthen, John Willard Anslow and Cecil Franklin Cavanah—sailed for Le Havre aboard the S. S. President Harding. On their arrival in France State Department attaches will arrange for transportation to Djibouti in French Somaliland and thence overland to Addis Ababa.

There is only one radio station in Ethiopia and on this the American legation, with all other diplomatic representatives and newspaper correspondents in the country, is dependent for communication with the outside world. Thus, the State Department deemed it wise to arrange for an emergency service in order that it might be able to communicate instantly with Cornelius Van H. Engert, American charge d'affaires in the Ethiopian capital.

Called Crack Technicians.

The men, loaned to the State Department by the Navy, are regarded as among this country's crack radio technicians. All have been in the Navy for seven years or more. Tanner, with a rating as "chief radioman," has been on duty with the station ship Reina Mercedes at Annapolis. Cauthen, "radioman first class," for the last two years has been attached to the naval radio station at Arlington. Anslow's last post was at the naval radio station at Norfolk and Cavannah has been on duty in the Naval Communications Office here.

Another development on what might be called this country's "war front" was a visit of Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso to Undersecretary of State William Phillips. The envoy said he came concerning a routine matter, but admitted that he had discussed the Italo-Ethiopian situation with the Undersecretary. He denied his talk had any significance.

It was Rosso's first visit to the

Gen. Atterbury Is Dead; Famed Railway Figure

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 20.—Gen. William Wallace Atterbury, retired president of the Pennsylvania Railroad and war-time transportation expert for the American Government, died today in his seventieth year.

He passed away in Bryn Mawr Hospital after a long illness. His physician, Dr. David Reisman, said the end came after a stroke of apoplexy.

Gen. Atterbury had been ill since July, 1934, when he underwent an operation for gallstones in the same hospital. His recovery was slow, and last winter he went South on his yacht, returning here in January in the hope of resuming his duties.

His condition, however, did not show the gain hoped for, and in April he retired from the presidency he had held since 1925.

Returned to Hospital.

Eight days ago, Gen. Atterbury returned to the hospital for observation, and until today he seemed to be progressing satisfactorily.

At 2 p. m., Eastern standard time, today, however, he suffered a stroke. His physicians were summoned, but they could not revive him, and a half hour later he died.

His wife and two sons, William Wallace, jr., a student at Yale, the general's alma mater, and Malcolm, were at his bedside when he died. Also surviving are another son, George R., a Harvard student, and a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Connelly, of suburban Radnor.

Gen. Atterbury retained his directorship in the company when he gave up the presidency in April.

Foiled Evelyn Hoey's Attempt At Death Leap, Rogers Asserts

By the Associated Press.

West Chester, Pa., Sept. 20.—Sitting with arms folded, Henry H. Rogers 3d tonight calmly told a coroner's jury investigating the fatal shooting of Evelyn Hoey at his country home that he recently had prevented the Broadway torch singer from leaping to death from a New York hotel window. He seized her as she was half way out, he said.

Preceding him to the witness chair was Joseph S. Clark, Philadelphia attorney, who arrived at the farm for a conference with Rogers just after the girl was shot. He quoted Rogers as declaring that Miss Hoey had shot herself and as saying "I loved her, I have nothing more to live for," and "Get me a gun."

Miss Hoey had been distraught about having to return to St. Louis, Rogers said, when he met her after his return from Europe.

Refusing to accept a suicide theory, however, Vincent P. Downey, attorney for the girl's parents, said "there's no reason in the world why she should want to take her life. * * * There are too many angles to this case that are mysterious and probably never will see the light of day."

Their version of what happened the night of September 11 before

Il Duce to Delay Protest to League

Plans for Discussions Shift Attention From African Problem.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 20.—British and Italian mobilization in the Mediterranean and Red Sea went steadily forward tonight on a scale official and diplomatic quarters agreed would have been interpreted in 1914 as a cause of war.

As the grim preparations continued apace, with both countries speedily tightening up defenses of land, sea and air, war talk in other capitals was labeled preposterous in London. Here the public as yet seems only dimly aware of the extensive warlike activities.

Official declarations of "we have no quarrel with Italy" were heard in Whitehall. Officials expressed surprise at a report Italy would protest to the League against the British concentration of warships in the Mediterranean.

French Concern.

Indications developed of a deep French concern in the possibility of war as the French defense ministries began to whip their services into alert readiness both on French shores and in far-off Djibouti, where the railway leading to Ethiopia's capital begins.

The famous Admiralty Harbor at Gibraltar took on a warlike appearance as the only remaining entrance was closed with submarine nets and a boom defense. Scores of military airplanes roared overhead in training maneuvers, more than a dozen warships stood by with steam up in the harbor awaiting any eventuality and citizens bought candles, following a proclamation it might be necessary to cut off the electricity "in certain emergencies."

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 20.—The probability of direct negotiations between Italy and Great Britain suddenly and unexpectedly shifted the entire Italo-Ethiopian situation tonight.

Italian sources disclosed to the Associated Press that direct negotiations between the two countries on what London considers an Italian menace to Egypt through Italy's colony of Libya have begun, or will begin soon.

The concentration of Britain's fleet in the Mediterranean, League circles said, was not because of Ethiopia, but because London believed Egypt was endangered when Rome sent troops to Libya.

Egypt Vital.

Egypt is vital to Great Britain because of its immense interests there, including the Suez Canal. These sources reported that London also objected to what was termed anti-British and pro-Italian propaganda in Egypt designed to hurt Britain's standing.

One report here is that if Il Duce would agree to move his Libyan troops from the Egyptian frontier London in turn would withdraw some of its warships from the Mediterranean.

Because of this, it was said, Mussolini has decided to postpone until next week a proposed protest to the League against the presence of the vast British armada in the Mediterranean.

Should Italy and Britain reach an agreement on the Libya-Egyptian question, well-informed circles in Geneva believe it would have a favorable effect upon the atmosphere surrounding the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

The atmosphere was tense here, meanwhile, as Geneva waited for the Italian cabinet to act tomorrow on the League's peace proposal.

Premier Pierre Laval of France, who has striven for conciliation, departed for Paris without leaving behind him any new ground for optimism.

Recent Moves.

One of Mussolini's men likened the sudden appearance of the British battleships at Gibraltar to the sudden cry of "fire" in a crowded theater.

"Instead of calming the situation," he continued, "they are starting a world panic." He cited alarm in financial centers, the cancellation of some Mediterranean pleasure cruises, the refusal of war risks by insurance companies and other instances.

on a scale that brings to every business and to every individual the dangers flowing from a continuing unbalanced budget.

"Regulation by the Federal Government of all forms of production, industrial and agricultural, and all local marketing and retailing, with the Federal Government infringing upon the individual in his everyday affairs in making a living, in planting crops, in working at a trade for himself, or in working as an employe of another.

"Delegation of powers to the executive department of the Federal Government, and constantly enlarging administrative agencies and bureaucracy for detailed applications of measures, with all decisions for the whole country at a central point and consequent delays and expense for citizens even as to matters in themselves of small importance."

Citing specific instances, the report pointed to banking leigslation to limits on salaries of employes of concerns obtaining loans from the RFC, and to relations between employer and employe covered by the labor relations act.

"These statutory provisions," it continued, "have related to the issue of securities for the financing of business enterprises with such extreme provisions imposing vicarious penalties and liabilities as to reduce legitimate financing and refinancing.

Business Renews Fight On Gasoline Tax Rise

A positive stand against any increase in gasoline taxes in the District was taken again yesterday by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association as the board of governors met in the general offices in the Star Building.

The present tax of 2 cents per gallon is sufficient to take care of all requirements for road construction and maintenance in the District, the association stated.

The association also voted to protest to the Commissioners against any delay in widening F street, between Seventh and Ninth streets, and expressed hope that the work would be done before winter.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

SUPPOSE you are in the bituminous coal business. It has been hard going for a long time and you are lucky to have been able to hang on.

Now comes a new law, the Guffey-Snyder coal act, to set up a little NRA in the bituminous coal business. Maybe you were against it. Or perhaps you were for it. Or maybe you didn't care. It doesn't make any difference. What you are up against now is this:

On the coal you produce and sell you must pay the Government a tax of 15 per cent of the sale price. If you abide by the code of fair trade practices laid down in the law, 90 per cent of this impost will be refunded so that your net tax will be 1½ per cent.

You go to your lawyer. The chances are he advises you that the law is unconstitutional and that the thing to do is to ignore it. You pay him big money for that. If he is wrong he doesn't go to jail and neither do you. But you would have to pay the 15 per cent penalty tax which is likely to prove, as was intended, fatal to violators of the rules set up under the law. Good Lord, you say, can't they tell us definitely whether this law is constitutional?

They will tell you in time. But in the meantime your harried fellow coal men are going through this sort of legal hocus-pocus:

In Washington: President Walter Carter, of the Carter Coal Co., goes into Federal district court and asks two things. First, he asks that the Federal Government be restrained from enforcing the Guffey coal act. Second, he asks that he himself be restrained from complying with the act. His board of directors had ordered him to comply with the law and President Carter insisted that as a stockholder he had a right to object to such an order from his board of directors. What happens? Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson, representing the Government, tells the court that the Guffey act has not gone into effect, that President Roosevelt has not appointed the board to administer it, that the tax complained of has not been actually levied.

So the court postponed the case until after the Federal tax collector starts to work. Then Coal Man Carter can disregard the law at his peril. Eventually he will find out whether the law is constitutional or a scrap of paper.

In Louisville: The R. C. Tway Coal Co., joining with some others, recently sought an injunction to restrain United States tax collectors from collecting the Guffey coal tax. Then a stockholder of the R. C. Tway company, C. H. Clark, rushed into court, asking an order to compel his company to abide by the act on the ground that if it didn't the 15 per cent penalty tax would be fatal to the company in which he had invested his money Next, the lawyers for the stockholder and the company got together and both sides made a deal, too involved to recite here, by which they hode to foil the Government's claim of prematureness which resulted in delaying the Washington case. This way they hope to bring about an early lower court ruling on the constitutionality of the act. After that the case in normal course would go to the circuit court of appeals and finally to the Supreme Court.

Then you and all the other coal men would find out whether the Guffey act is a law or not.

The American Liberty League's "unofficial Supreme Court" has shown how quickly a group of lawyers can compare a law with the Constitution and the decisions and rule upon its constitutionality. That is a simple procedure which the official Supreme Court could be authorized to adopt. But no one seems interested enough to try to have this done.

Meanwhile hard-headed business men, with their money and even the fate of their businesses at stake, go on paying out attorney fees, patiently participating in these endless games of legal leap-frog.

What's this heresy down in Old Virginia?

The University of Virginia, staid old institution founded by Thomas Jefferson and covered with the traditions of States' rights, comes out in the October issue of its Virginia Quarterly Review with an article by Dr. Charles A. Beard, psychoanalyzing the doctrine of States' rights with the cold irreverence of a surgeon going about his business.

"The pages of American history," says Dr. Beard, "are so crowded with inconsistencies and violations of 'principles' by leaders of both parties, and by the Supreme Court, that even Macaulay's schoolboy blushes when he hears his elders now raging and tearing their hair over the 'sacred Constitution' (as the speakers choose to understand it) and the 'sacred doctrine of States' rights' (as the speakers choose to understand that). It is only because our editors, orators, columnists, and instructors of the public are ignorant of history or wilfully distort it that they write and spout the way they do over the ancient myths of small minds.

"It is impossible to survey the history of this long conflict over the nature of the Constitution and States' rights without coming to the conclusion that, in the main, theories follow interests instead of controlling them."

In the South, professor, those used to be shooting words.

The resignation of Joseph P. Kennedy as chairman of SEC is a blow to the Administration. Kennedy, former Wall Street operator, is recognized both in the Government and in financial quarters as having done one of the most clean-cut, workmanlike administrative jobs in the whole New Deal set-up. Also, he was about the only important official in the New Deal agencies who had the confidence of the financial community and who could win their co-operation. Mr. Roosevelt will have difficulty finding such an ideal combination in any other one man.

Gen. Atterbury Is Dead; Famed Railway Figure

He would have been retired next January on his seventieth birthday under the company's pension policy. In anticipation of this, he had personally groomed Martin W. Clement, a vice president, for the post, and the directorate followed out his plans by naming Clement to succeed Atterbury.

Widely known as a transportation official and expert, Gen. Atterbury in later years took an active interest in politics for some time. He became a leader in Republican party councils in the State, was elected to the national committee and served as a delegate to several conventions. A few years ago, however, he turned his back on the political picture and thereafter remained inactive.

Gen. Atterbury's career was wholly devoted to transportation in general and the Pennsylvania Railroad in particular. So outstanding ws his work for the Government during the war, that he was awarded with the Distinguisher Service Cross.

He had obtained a leave of obsence from the railroad to take up the Government's transportation problems and place them on a wartime footing here and abroad. As a brigadier general he first helped untangle the domestic traffic systems and then went to France, in charge of the movements of troops and supplies from debarkation points to front-line trenches.

Gen. Atterbury's career dates back to 1886, when, a few months out of Sheffield Scientific School at Yale, he joined the railroad as an apprentice in its Altoona shops.

He was born in New Albany, Ind., January 21, 1856, and went to Yale after spending his boyhood years in Detroit.

Three years after he took up his duties in Altoona he was made foreman of the shops. His rise was steady through the company's various lines, until in 1909 he entered the executive department as fifth vice president in charge of transportation. In May, 1912, he was named vice president in charge of operations, and was holding that post when he left the company temporarily to enter the Government's service.

He returned in 1920 and took up his post again in the company's offices here. In 1925 he was named to succeed Samuel Rea, who retired.

Outside of his office Gen. Atterbury's principal interests were golf and farming, and he turned to the latter at his model farm at Frazier. His home, Boudinot Farms, was at Radnor.

The present Mrs. Atterbury was his second wife, whom he married in 1915, five years after the death of his first wife.

department since the Italo-Ethiopian threat became a distinct reality. He called briefly on August 20 and his visit prior to that was on July 10, when Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in no uncertain terms, gave the Italian envoy to understand that this Government was deeply interested in the preservation of peace and was particularly interested in strict adherence to the Kellogg peace pact by those subscribing to it.

Both Italy and Ethiopia are signatories to the treaty, which outlaws war as an instrument of national policy and a means of solving disputes.

amendment was necessary for the purpose.

"If the NRA case had been presented properly to the Supreme Court in the first place," he said, "that maladroit decision never would have been rendered.

"Instead of presenting the facts and demanding that the case be decided in the light of the emergency confronting us, rather than on the basis of precedent, we learn that the Government has no power to regulate the killing of a chicken in Brooklyn.

Calls League 'Excuse.'

"Properly presented, that case would have shown that such things at NRA are amply justified under the Constitution. The Court should be given a chance to render an opinion on the facts under the commerce clause of the Constitution."

Criticizing the Liberty League for its recent statement asserting that certain laws passed at the recent Congress were unconstitutional, Johnson arose from his seat and made a gesture of contempt as he said:

"It's simply a test between those 58 lawyers who've prostituted themselves and the principles for which the New Deal stands. The Liberty League is just an excuse for Democrats to vote for a Republican."

All these things and more, the general said, will be dealt with in his lecture series.

"I intend to say in public a few things about the essential features of our problems today. I'll talk quite a bit about economics, some about politics and a whole lot about the Constitution."

and after the fatal shot was fired and the body of the star of the stage hit, "Fifty Million Frenchmen," was found dead in an upstairs bedroom, coincided in many respects with that furnished last night by William P. Kelley, photographer and guest at the old house.

Battin testified Rogers and Kelley were seated in the living room when the shot was fired and that Rogers ran upstairs and returned, saying:

"Oh, my God! She's shot herself. My sweetheart shot herself. Where are the guns? I'll use them myself."

Yamada said he did not hear the shot, but that he heard the hurried tread of feet in the living room or on the stairs and that on going to the bedroom, saw the body of Miss Hoey on the floor, a pistol at her feet.

Both Rogers and Kelley, who are at liberty on $2,500 bond each, smiled as the witnesses described a drinking party that preceded the killing.

Asked by District Attorney William E. Parke if Rogers had many drinks, the Japanese cook replied, "same as every day."

Calmly and unhesitatingly, the caretaker said he went to the home early that night to discuss his wages and Rogers' dogs, and was in the kitchen eating soup when the shot was fired. He said he could see through the window and observe Rogers and Kelley in the living room. Rogers, he said, went to the foot of the stairs and Kelley entered the kitchen.

● Sending Sidney Skolsky, the famous Broadway columnist, 'way out West to cover Hollywood was just like ordering the society editor to report on a war. That was what the wiseacres were saying not so long ago. After all, they explained, Skolsky was pretty good at writing tintypes of Broadway characters, and getting stories in the night clubs, and all that sort of thing, but what would happen to him when Hollywood's press agents got hold of him, or the Klieg lights dazzled him, or he tried to understand a studio executive's English?

But those who laughed when he sat down at his typewriter are cheering lustily now, for Skolsky's Hollywood column is better, more varied, more amusing, than Hollywood itself. It's four-star stuff, with the smooth performance of a Myrna Loy, the direction of a Frank Capra, the glamour of a Cecil DeMille production, and the human interest of a Mickey Mouse cartoon.

In short, Skolsky is writing a column from Hollywood which is even better than was his Broadway column, and if you aren't reading it five days every week in The Washington Post you're missing something.

While these men may have access to valuable information abroad, nevertheless they would not enjoy the confidence of foreign financial authorities to the extent that a man of Kennedy's prestige would. Every embassy and legation in Washington knows that Kennedy has been one of the President's closest advisers on financial matters during the last 15 months and that he is an intimate friend of Mr. Roosevelt.

Thus when the retiring SEC chairman appears to discuss with them the question of registering their securities here—supplying information regarding gold reserves and similar matters—it is regarded here but natural that the topic of currency stabilization will come up, along with the obstacles in the way of international agreement and how they can be removed.

Incidentally Kennedy, at a farewell conference with the press, held after President Roosevelt at Hyde Park announced reluctant acceptance of the SEC chairman's resignation, revealed that two foreign governments already had indicated an intention of registering their securities here. He did not reveal their names.

Possible Successor Discussed.

Kennedy's successor as chairman will be elected by the commission after his successor as a member of the SEC is named by the President. James M. Landis, now a member of the SEC and former Federal Trade Commissioner, is regarded as the most likely choice for the chairmanship. He served in that capacity this summer during Kennedy's absences from the city.

The President is understood to have given no inkling as to who he has in mind to fill the vacancy left by Kennedy on the commission. It was believed here that if the post is filled from within the commission's personnel John J. Burns, general counsel to the SEC and a Kennedy protege, or Baldwin B. Bane, executive administrator of the SEC, will get first consideration.

Starlings, Fall's Darlings, Here And D. C. Girds for Yearly War

Fall brings football, oysters, hay fever and starlings. Our hero likes a good football game, can stow away a dozen oysters on the half shell and sympathizes with hayfever sufferers, but his chief concern is starlings.

"They had better look out," Clifford Lanham warned yesterday, scanning a memorandum which gave details of his contemplated $14,317.52 drive against starlings for the 1935-36 season.

Lanham is the District's superintendent of trees and parkings. When the days start getting short, he assumes the added burden of starling nemesis, taking command of an army of relief workers who go after the pestiferous birds with balloons and pebble-filled tin cans.

He has been the Capital's No. 1 starling chaser since the fall of 1932, when he and a handful of staff employes attempted to disperse the thousands that roosted on the District Building's ledges and in nearby trees.

In 1933 the campaign developed auspiciously under CWA funds. Last year additional territory was taken in, thanks to an EWA allotment. This year the alphabetical angel is WPA, and Lanham is confident that the birds will be repulsed even more effectively than they were in 1934, when he claimed victories on the District Building, F street and Pennsylvania avenue fronts.

The District Commissioners have approved his request for $14,317.52 to renew the war this season, Lanham said, adding that he is awaiting only final approval by the Works Progress Administration before reopening hostilities.

Balloons again will be the chief weapon. When night falls and the starlings come home to roost, a man will walk around each square in the downtown area, sending up his captive balloons to frighten away the birds on ledges. Last year 12 gross of toy balloons were used. Each cost a nickel and it cost another nickel to fill it up with hydrogen.

"Those birds"—starlings plague Washington only in the fall and winter—"are already returning in large numbers," said Lanham yesterday.

Seven Divisions Return to Annapolis on Board U.S.S. Wyoming.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 20.—Seven divisions of the Naval Reserve from Baltimore, Washington and Richmond are homeward bound today after disembarking from the U. S. S. Wyoming, which took them on a two-week training cruise to Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Three hundred bronzed youths jumped into motor launches this morning for the trip to the Reina Mercedes wharf, where they were met by motor trucks ready to take them home.

The Wyoming arrived in Annapolis Roads at dawn, and a custom inspection was held before disembarking at 11 a. m.

The reserve units left Annapolis aboard the Wyoming September — for New York. There the U. S. S. Arkansas, with New York reservists aboard, joined the Wyoming for the voyage to Halifax. En route, the detachments had drill and other naval practice before reaching their destination on September 16. Three days liberty wats granted them in Halifax before battle practice began on the return trip. The Arkansas returned to New York while the Wyoming continued to Annapolis.

The Wyoming will leave Monday for Philadelphia, where reservists from the Middle West will go on a two-week cruise to Charleston, S. C., leaving October 1.

Italy Softens Her Attitude Toward Britain

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 20.—Italy displayed a slightly more conciliatory attitude toward Great Britain tonight, but a high source disclosed she would protest to the League of Nations against the massing of British warships in the Mediterranean.

Reflecting the change in attitude, war shares, such as munitions, fell on the stock exchange. A spokesman indicated there is a chance for negotiations.

An authoritative source said Premier Mussolini had ordered Baron Pompeo Aloisi, chief delegate at Geneva, to protest to the League Council that the concentration of British ships constitutes as much a violation of the Covenant as Italy's sending troops to East Africa.

Mussolini's own newspaper, the Popolo d'Italia, softened toward London. It asserted:

"To say that Italy intends to menace the British Empire along the Nile or Red Sea is absurd. Italy recognizes British rights on the sources of the Nile and with regard to the Red Sea, Italy has occupied a position there for 50 years which she began in collaboration with Great Britain."

Firm On Sanctions.

The newspaper said firmly, however, that sanctions would "irreparably shatter the Stresa front (formed by Italy, Britain and France) and would oblige Italy to abandon Geneva."

These developments came on the eve of a cabinet meeting tomorrow at which action will be taken on the League's plan for peace.

A treasury communique disclosed war preparations are now costing Italy more than 350,000,000 lire (about $26,000,000) a month, or more than 4,000,000,000 lire a year.

A government spokesman said that although the Committee of Five's proposals could not be accepted in its present form, there is a possibility of Italy's accepting them as a basis for discussion provided they are considerably modified. He stressed the necessity of modifying considerably the spirit in which they were conceived, which he characterized as "unfriendly."

Deep significance was attached to the drop of war and munitions shares after the more conciliatory attitude was shown. All other stocks held firm or advanced.

Drops by Points.

Ilva Co., which manufactures guns and war products, fell 7½ points; Montecatini Chemical Co. fell 6½, Monte Amiata Chemical dropped 2½; Ansaldo Co., which manufactures motors, warships and artillery, fell 5 points, which was a drop of more than 10 per cent; Fiat Co., which makes machine guns, tanks and military airplanes, fell 16 points, and the Aterns Co., manufacturers of guns and steel, lost 14 points.

Political and diplomatic circles divided their predictions of what the cabinet would decide to do tomorrow. Some said it would reiterate a declaration of September 14 of "no compromise," while others said the meeting would leave the door open to some possibility of negotiation, provided the committee of five changed its proposals.

Larger Fund Promised For Shepherd Airport

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 20.—Promise of $75,000 aid from Federal WPA funds instead of the original $25,000 asked for development of Shepherd Landing Field, county airport near here, and promise of at least one stop a day by Central Air Lines at the field if 200 passengers a year can be assured, resulted from a conference here yesterday between field representatives, Representative Jennings Randolph, Maj. Charles Cox, of the Bureau of Aeronautics, and D. A. McCarroll, of Louisville, Ky., representing the air lines.

Randolph said the air field project stands at the top among similar West Virginia WPA projects on file with the Government with an excellent chance of getting the assistance desired. The money would be spent to bring the field up to commercial requirements and Government approval.

The Future of a Film Executive Sets the Second-Guessers to Mild Surmising

W. Sheehan Is Given New Job Daily on Paper

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The future affiliations of Mr. Winfield R. Sheehan, who recently resigned from the position of vice president in charge of production of Fox Films, is causing no end of conjecture in the motion picture industry—and out of it, too, for that matter.

Not a day goes by but some new prophesy as to his future course comes to hand by mail, wire or word of mouth. Through it all, Mr. Sheehan remains silent. For 20 years his name was practically synonymous with Fox Films. He made many fine pictures, reaped rich rewards and then stepped gracefully from the picture when the merger was arranged between Twentieth Century and Fox and it became apparent that he would be expected to share responsibilities—and rewards—with Darryl Zanuck, Chairman Joseph M. Schenck's fair-haired boy.

Not only did Mr. Sheehan step gracefully from the picture—and, for the time being, pictures—but he also married Mme. Maria Jeritza, internationally famous diva, and embarked upon a honeymoon tour of Europe which will continue until November 1, or thereabouts.

Business matters, at the moment, seem not to weigh too heavily upon the Sheehan mind. His business concerns, however, are virtually crushing the best minds among those whose job it is to keep abreast of developments in the cinema. They are "shooting at the moon" with as fine a line of bad guesses as ever found their way into the mails and over the wires.

Wild Guess No. 1.

For example, I quote a release that reached this desk yesterday:

"A report has been gaining momentum around the Stock Exchange that William Randolph Hearst and Winfield R. Sheehan are acquiring a big slice of the stock of RKO, preliminary to the publisher's and the former Fox producer's becoming aligned with Radio.

The report, first whispered around financial circles a weak ago, reached the open "certainty" status during the last few days and is believed to have had its effect on jumping the RKO issue. A week ago the stock was listed at 2¾. Last night it closed at 3⅞, after making 4⅛ during the day.

According to the rumor, Hearst is planning to take his Cosmopolitan producing organization from Warners and join Radio, with Sheehan on his return from Europe November 1, also going to that same lot in charge of production.

No verification for such a report can be obtained at the RKO home office, but it is known that recently so-called "hot tips" have been wired to brokerage houses all over the country, particularly on the Coast, that Hearst and Sheehan will both be prominently identified in the company's reorganization."

So much for yesterday's disposition of Mr. Sheehan's business future. Today had a different story to tell.

Wild Guess No. 2.

"Owing to the great demand for double features, reports persist that there is to be formed shortly a new $20,000,000 motion picture company. According to local trade talk, this new firm will have no connection with any of the existing companies, but will build up from scratch its own producing and distributing organizations.

"Among those mentioned as heading this new venture is Winfield Sheehan, who recently resigned as vice president in charge of production for Fox Films."

So you pays your money—if any—and you takes your cherce—if ditto. Personally I prefer to await Mr. Winnie Sheehan's return, on or about November 1, and then listen to him guess what he is going to do from that point forward.

For what this Winnie Sheehan elects to do will have considerable bearing upon the future of the film industry.

The man who made "Cavalcade" and permitted his swan song with Fox to take the form of two such excellent pictures as "Curly Top," starring Shirley Temple, and "The Farmer Takes a Wife," with Janet Gaynor and Henry Fonda, is a power to be reckoned with.

Mr. Sheehan, born in Buffalo, N. Y., 52 years ago this month, came to pictures from the newspaper game—Buffalo Courier and New York World—via the secretaryship to New York City's fire and police commissioners.

He was associated with William Fox throughout the building of the great Fox enterprises and remained after his former chief had been deposed.

It is not so important where his future affiliations in the picture industry will be as that they be somewhere in that industry and not outside in some competitive enterprise.

"Our Mary" will be among scores of picture people in ringside seats at the Max Baer-Joe Louis heavyweight joust in New York next Tuesday night, unless sudden changes in "shooting" schedules interfere. The former mistress of Pickfair plans to fly East for the brawl, as do George Raft, who used to do a little leather throwing himself; Joe E. Brown, Bob Woolsey and numerous others not "in work."

Little Fills a Want.

Although not sufficiently orientated at the time to be present at the preview proffered the press, and not even having had opportunity to visit it since, I, nevertheless, would express the belated opinion that the Little Theater, on Ninth street near F, has a definite place in the Capital's scheme of things as the home of worthy revivals of films that possess more than a momentary and ephemeral appeal.

With such films as Norma Shearer's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street"—voted by more than 400 critics as foremost of last year's "ten best films of the year"—on view today and tomorrow, and "Operator 13," the colorful drama of Secret Service in the War Between the States, with Marion Davies and Gary Cooper, booked for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, as typical examples of the sort of celluloid the Little seeks to keep alive, there can be no question of the support it will receive from thoughtful theatergoers who do not tire of quality and do not demand mediocrity.

The acoustical equipment of the Little, under its new management, is unique. I have it in mind to make a painstaking survey of this provision for perfect audibility which, I am given to believe, has been carried to the point of wiring every seat in the house in order that sound reception may be unimpaired.

More of this later. To one with no mechanical bent whatever it is all a little vague at the moment.

During the run of the first "Voice of Experience" screen short at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning today, patrons wishing to consult the famous "voice" will be able to do so without leaving the lobby. Manager Charles Brennan has installed a special mailbox in the lobby and all problems deposited in it, sealed, will be forwarded, unopened, to Dr. Marion Sayle Taylor—the "Voice's" real name—who, by special arrangement, will answer them direct.

Two screen performances that will reveal themselves today for the first time in the National Capital should emerge more than passing interest on the part of customers who enjoy singling out those who seem destined for future favor before the cameras and microphones.

One of these is Harry Stockwell's impersonation of the plainsman-song writer-singer in "Here Comes the Band," at Loew's Fox; the other, Edith Fellows' uncommonly fine—and proportionately irritating—portrayal of the spoiled daughter of a domestic establishment that seems headed for the demnition bowwows, until Claudette Colbert takes a hand, in "She Married Her Boss," at the Earle.

As long ago as last Monday morning in these columns we went hook, line, sinker and one of the oars for these two fine journeyman jobs of pretending and we are perfectly willing to risk charges of repetitive redundancy to lay emphasis upon the fact that here are two dandy pieces of work.

It wouldn't surprise me if raves continued to appear here about them through most of the week, although this is not to be construed as a promise!

Every-Hour-on-Hour Note.

Speaking of "She Married Her Boss," there is an occasional laugh, believe it or not, in the "Film Time Tables" appearing elsewhere on this page. Today, for instance, "'She Married Her Boss,' at 11 a. m., 1:40, 4:25, 7:10 and 9:50 p. m."

It hardly seems enough!

Gives a One-Man Fashion Show!

Joe Cook finds a substitute for his old "One-Man Vaudeville Show" in illustrating what the correct morning wear will be for the athletically inclined young man about town. It's all part of Joe's inimitable clowning in his latest comedy screen featurette, "Penny Wise," recently produced at the Astoria, N. Y., studios under the direction of Al Christie. This is probably just another reason why he will not imitate four Hai-way-ians!

SHOULD Government workers be allowed to hold outside jobs?

This question frequently reaches our desk in the form of complaints. Taxi drivers claim regular salaried Government clerks are driving cabs after office hours. Professional men claim Federal lawyers and technicians have thriving practices outside the Government, including several of the "$10,000-a-year Congressmen."

BAKER.

Here is a typical letter summarizing such complaints:

". . . I believe that no person can successfully serve two employers. Even though he is physically able, the fact remains that the thought he gives to his night job is subtracted from the thought he might have given to his day (Government) job. With those who are not physically fit it usually results in a lessening of the daily output.

"There is no doubt that the Government workers who are employed outside of working hours do take from other needy persons a chance to make a living.

"Referring to the second item, may I call attention to the Government lawyers who handle private cases and thus make the road of the Washington attorney the hardest in the United States; the accountant, who after his day's work in a Federal Department is done, takes the work (usually at low prices) that might be obtained by those who make their sole living by practicing accounting; the Government chiefs, usually with high salaries, who teach in night schools; and the Government workers who drive taxis after working hours, and thus actually cause taxi drivers to go hungry.

"And, peculiarly enough, it is my firm belief that night work usually cuts down the efficiency of the worker to a degree that retards his promotion and he accomplishes less worth while during his working life.

"(Signed) J. S. (F)."

We welcome the views of readers on this subject—or any other pertaining to Government personnel problems. Each letter must be signed with the writer's name and address, but on publication, if requested, initials or pen names will be used and the author's identity kept confidential. A pair of tickets to one of Loew's theaters will be awarded for each letter published.

Chartering of two new units was announced last night by the American Federation of Government Employes. They are Lodge No. 217, Veterans Administration, Augusta, Ga., and Lodge No. 218, general, Denver, Colo.

YESTERDAY afternoon a committee from Resettlement Administration was told at headquarters of the American Federation of Government Employes that the Zeuch case was no affair of the national AFGE office.

The committee, headed by Mrs. Janet Gaines, president of Lodge No. 206, called on Charles I. Stengle, AFGE executive officer, and other AFGE officers, to establish the membership of Dr. William E. Zeuch, who was dismissed from Resettlement recently. It was announced later that Dr. Zeuch's name is now on the national roll, having appeared there August 23, which, incidentally, coincides with the date of his dismissal, according to an AFGE attache.

The committee admitted during the conference that Dr. Zeuch was not discharged for union activities. Whereupon, Col. Stengle declared it was not a case for the A. F. G. E. to fight. Col. Stengle and other A. F. G. E. national officres present asked then the reasons for the lodge's interest in the case.

Mrs. Gaines replied that there was not time enough at that period to go into the grievances. Further questioning drew evasive answers from committee members.

National Fruit Growers Express.

"It's funny how rumors grow, but it is well to copyright a good one," observed Miss Estella H. Meade, Interstate Commerce Commission, in commenting on the report that a new Government employes' organization, the N. F. G. E., was about to make its bow in Washington.

Miss Meade, who was active at the recent A. F. G. E. convention in behalf of Miss Esther Penn, former A. F. G. E. national secretary, said:

"Someone who was feeling humorous told John P. Simpson, president of the I. C. Lodge, about a new organization being formed of Government employes. The president was to serve without salary; the secretary to be reimbursed for actual expenses only, and the lobbying was to be hired outside the organization.

"Then," Miss Meade continued, "Wednesday morning someone told Mr. Simpson that a meeting had been held and the president was going to be a woman (not mentioning that said woman had been present at the convention, and not mentioning anything about the secretary). Apparently, or possibly, Mr. Simpson thinks the president is to be Miss Penn, and the secretary myself. The meeting which is supposed to have been held Tuesday evening consisted of a few joking remarks between two people.

"N. F. G. E. really stands for 'National Fruit Growers Express.'" Another name jokingly suggested was the A. E. F. E. It was a tie between the two.

"What phones were 'temporarily disconnected' as per copyrighted article?" Miss Meade asked us. Well, we did not attend the meeting of the two people, so we don't know!

Suggested Solutions of Farm Questions Based on Expanded Exports Doomed to Failure.

By Samuel Crowther.

THE many suggested solutions of the farm questions which start with the assumption that expanding foreign sales is the prime necessity cannot, when world conditions are considered, get very far. Realities block them.

Normally in a few farm products we have a surplus for export, but this surplus is not very important except in cotton. It is easy to be misled by the emphasis put on cotton and wheat and to imagine that they constitute the bulk of farming. In recent years, the cash income from vegetables has been higher than the income from all the grains, including corn. In 1932 the fruits and nuts crop was more valuable than the whole grain crop, while the income from dairy products was about seven times as great. The poultry and egg crop is more important than the cotton crop, and dairy products alone have often sold for 50 per cent more than the cotton crop and for about three-fourths of the entire livestock and hog output.

Our agricultural exports in quantity, taking the average of 1923-1925 as 100, were 84 in 1932 as against 78 in 1931 and 89 in 1913. The big cotton export year was 1932, but in effect it was a bankruptcy sale of cotton, for the bales went out at less than the cost of production.

• • • •

THE New Deal has been roundly blamed for destroying our export markets for agricultural products. That is one of the very few things it has not done except in cotton. Omitting the war years, our food exports have been for a long while declining in the face of the competition of Canada, Australia and Argentina. Since the war, the movement toward self-containment in all the principal food importing countries has made such progress that the international food market as it existed before the war has ceased.

No considerations can induce any of the nations who participated in the Great War to allow themselves again to depend on outside sources for vital supplies. Domestic food sources have been everywhere cultivated by tariffs, quotas and subsidies and thereby vested interests have been created which simply will not permit our own vested agricultural interests to compete with them at any price. No foreign nation will plow in its own food in order to buy from us.

We may for a short time, by export bounties or subsidies, offer our food surpluses abroad at world prices or less than world prices. In other words, we may dump. But just as we defend ourselves against dumping, so will other nations defend themselves.

WITH cotton the situation is somewhat different. For some years, while the West was opening, we were low-cost producers of food products. That we no longer are. Being the low-cost producer of an agricultural commodity and building a national economy upon a single product going out into world trade has never paid. Witness Ireland, Cuba and Brazil.

Our South held its cotton monopoly longer than any other country ever held any other agricultural monopoly, but it is an open question whether the South has been blessed or cursed by cotton. For, being dependent so largely upon the export trade, every foreign flurry found instant expression in the cotton fields. When the Great War broke out, the South went to pieces and the "Buy a bale of cotton" movement was started. But that was not an unusual situation. Writing in 1846, Ezra C. Seaman, in his "Essays on the Progress of Nations," said:

"The table on page 209 shows not only the price of cotton, the great staple of the South, is declining, but also that the increased production causes a decline so rapid that it is impossible for the growers to increase the aggregate value of the crop; no matter how much they may increase its quantity. As nearly all the planters of the Southern Slave States depend mostly on the proceeds of their cotton crop to furnish themselves with the principal part of the necessaries as well as the comforts of life, cotton may be said to furnish them with the principal means of subsistence; and if its aggregate value does not increase, it is clear that an increased number cannot subsist upon its proceeds without lowering their scale and standard of living.

• • • •

"DURING the last six years, this cause has produced much embarrassment and distress among the cotton planters, and also among the merchants and bankers, who are their creditors; it must inevitably, and undoubtedly has, checked marriages and lessened the increase of the population of those States; and it will continue to do so, until the planters abandon their present free trade policy, and many of them turn their attention to the culture of sugar, coffee and tea, and to mining and manufacturing industries; until they produce less cotton, which is not needed, and more of such articles and commodities as they do need."

A parity between farm incomes and industrial incomes is necessary to promote the proper exchange of products in a great economic area such as the United States, but attempting to tie any large section of our economy to foreign economies is a movement away from reaching a balance and not a movement toward a balance. Promoting export trade is quite all right, provided anyone can give in advance an answer to the question: "At what price?"

Culbertson on Bridge

A Word to the Wise.

A warning and a bit of advice to all bridge clubs: This probably is the last summer that a bridge club, or any club for that matter, can get along without a modern air refrigerating system. The heat from partners' rotten bids already is bad enough and the members simply won't stand being broiled in addition by summer heat.

This means a great boon to bridge and to our bridge clubs which heretofore faced with dread the slump of hot summer months. I know that I often have dropped into a theater for relief from the heat. It is well known that in the winter bridge is one of the greatest rivals of the moving picture theaters as a means of recreation. Chances are now that this rivalry will be extended to the summer months and Roxy's alleged estimate that bridge already is costing the moving picture industry $30,000,000 a year may prove to be too conservative.

Nate Spingold is one moving picture magnate who already has profited from the example set by his theater's. In his New York house he pioneered a cardroom with an air cooling machine. In a room with the temperature constanly around 70 degrees, Nate and his guests sit and play bridge, forgeting that outside less fortunate ones had premonitions of sunstroke. Nate is one of the country's best players, although I admire him far more for his keen practical knowledge of the mass mind, and is entitled to his game in all sorts of weather. But perhaps if fewer people go to the movies next summer he will have vague regrets that he set so good an example.

I asked Nate Spingold to tell me the funniest hand he ever played and he showed me this one. He tried to overbid, expecting to be set 500 points or so to prevent his opponents from making a vulnerable small slam. To his amazed delight he found his partner making six-odd.

The bidding (East-West vulnerable):

West	North	East	South
1 Heart	1 Spade	2 Clubs	4 Spades
5 Clubs	Pass	5 Spades	Pass
6 Clubs	Pass	Pass	6 Spades
Dbl. (Final bid.)

East opened heart ace.

Had South (Mr. Spingold) passed six clubs instead of bidding six spades a diamond opening would have defeated the contract, for South could trump a heart return. South, knowing the six spades could be set only about 500 points, and not knowing that North had the diamond ace, decided not to take a chance on losing the rubber and a slam at the same time. Then, after West opened the top heart, North proceeded to make six spades. No opening lead would have set him. Dummy ruffed the first trick and led a spade; North finessed for West's king, winning with the spade queen. When he laid down the diamond ace, the king fell; so North took his spade ace, then finessed for the diamond jack. By ruffing four hearts in the dummy and discarding his losing club on the queen of diamonds he lost only one trick.

Today's Question.

♠ A-7 ♥ A-Q-10-5 ♦ A-7-6-5 ♣ A-10-6

Answer—No. The proper opening bid is one heart. As a rule, one no trump should be bid only with 4-3-3-3 distribution, even when holding all four aces. The reason is that with no short suit you gain nothing by having a trump suit and at no trump only nine tricks are required for game.

Soil Erosion Office Opens in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 20.—A technical staff of 21, headed by O. C. Bruce, project manager, which will direct Maryland's soil erosion program, opened offices here today.

This staff will direct the program, expected to continue for five years, at the following camps now being established: Harford County, near White Hall; Kent County, near Kennedyville; Anne Arundel County, near Harwood, and Washington County, in the Little Antietam and Israel Creek watersheds. Construction of a CCC camp is now under way near Boonsboro, where 216 workers will be quartered.

On The Air Today

Too much could not be said at this point in the radio season of the news shows to be introduced within the next month. True, there will be no new top names, no radical departures from programs prepared for the listening audience this time last year. Radio is canny about "taking a flyer" with an unknown entertainer or an untried device. Too much money is involved.

But in preparing a complete listing of the month's premieres for the radio page of The Sunday Post tomorrow, I could not help but be impressed with the somewhat dazzling quality of the artists offered for the public's approval this winter. It's a "million-dollar show" — with or without new "names."

Today, WMAL, at 4:45, Gabriel Heatter begins a new series of news annotations. Heatter was selected, with Edwin C. His programs were required listening, I am told, in many high schools in and around New York City.

Among the many requests for radio receiving sets being donated by Uncle George Wasserman to charitable institutions and homes for those not having the best of luck these days, has come a letter or two from individuals. Unfortunately, it is impossible for one man, no matter how generous, to provide sets free of charge to individuals. Uncle George's sets are avalable free of charge to institutions, hospitals and homes, where groups can be entertained. The Radio Editor of The Post will welcome suggestions on such institutions needing radio sets.

Tablet to Mark Camp Site of Lee

Antietam Memorial to Be Dedicated in 1937.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sharpsburg, Md., Sept. 20.—A bronze tablet will be erected on the site of Gen. Robert E. Lee's tent headquarters during the Battle of Antietam here, Mrs. M. S. R. Moler, Shepherdstown, W. Va., chairman of the Sharpsburg-Lee Memorial committee, announced. An acre of land near Antietam Station was purchased recently by the West Virginia division of the Daughters of the Confederacy and turned over to the memorial committee, which will seek to restore it to its original appearance.

The headquarters of Lee for three days, prior to and after the battle, were located in an oak grove on the site purchased. The oak grove has been cut down, but it is the plan of the committee to plant new trees.

Under the program outlined by the committee, the dedicatory ceremonies would be held in connection with the seventy-fifth anniversary of the battle, September 17, 1937, when it is planned to ask the Nation's President to attend. At this time it is proposed to turn the acre of land where the Lee headquarters were located over to the Government as a permanent part of the battlefield.

Dr. George Bolling Lee, grandson of Gen. Lee, who attended the seventy-third anniversary dinner Tuesday night here, has accepted an invitation to be present for the dedication of the bronze tablet.

Punishing The Innocent.

If a poor man is so unfortunate as to be indicted for a crime in the District just before or during the vacation season, he faces almost certain punishment whether guilty or not. Elwood Street, director of welfare, has revealed that 221 suspects arrested since the District Supreme Court adjourned for the summer are still awaiting trial behind bars. Nineteen others whose cases originated before the adjournment are in the same plight.

These individuals are in jail because they do not have sufficient means to provide bail. A considerable percentage of them may be found innocent. But the courts will not then be able to make restitution for the gross injustice done. Even those who are convicted will, in effect, have the judges' vacation period added to their terms.

The irony of the situation is intensified by the fact that such unwarranted punishment is meted out year after year, so that the court may enjoy a three months' vacation. It is true that one judge is always on hand during this period to take care of incidental matters. But no criminal trials are held. There is no escape, therefore, from the ugly fact that persons who may be innocent are forced to languish in jail for three months or longer while the judges relax.

The accumulation of prisoners became particularly acute this year because the District Jail is overcrowded. Some suspects are forced to sleep on the floor. Felons are crowded into inadequate quarters with men accused of lesser crimes. Incidentally, the cost of supporting these unconvicted prisoners is insignificant only when measured by the gross injustice involved.

Correction of this blot on our judicial system would, of course, be a very simple matter. Criminal trials could go forward during the summer perfectly easily. Surely that would not be an unendurable hardship for the judges. If the court would face the matter squarely, it is improbable that any attempt would be made to exonerate a system that results in punishment of innocent persons to make judges' vacations more pleasant. If not beneath its dignity, this seems an issue in which the lawyers' committee of the Liberty League might properly interest itself.

Mr. Kennedy's Resignation.

Since the passage of the holding company act, imposing heavy and ill-defined responsibilities upon the SEC for execution of the "death sentence," reports of the impending resignation of Joseph P. Kennedy as chairman of the commission have been the more unwelcome. The position he is now vacating is one of the most important administrative offices within the Government service.

During his chairmanship Mr. Kennedy has accomplished what seemed at the beginning to be an almost impossible task. He has made the securities act and the law regulating stock exchanges workable by exercising common sense in formulating rules and regulations. Instead of detracting from the effectiveness of the laws by liberal interpretations of restrictive provisions, the SEC, under the direction of its chairman, has made them more effective because acceptable on grounds of logic and constructive reform.

Mr. Kennedy's successor will have to be extremely able to equal his predecessor's record of accomplishment, especially with the additional burdens facing the new appointee under the holding-company act. As the large discretionary powers vested in the commission enable it to destroy those whom it regulates, the personnel of the SEC becomes a matter of decisive importance to the interests affected. Commissioner Ross, a recent appointee, is known to be an able opponent of the private utilities. If Mr. Kennedy's successor should be a man holding similar views, the balance of the commission would be upset at a most critical period of its history.

The selection of a chairman competent to discharge efficiently and impartially the new duties assigned to the SEC is the more important because of Mr. Kennedy's pioneer work in setting up a regulatory system for the stock exchanges and in softening the rigors of the securities act. Unfortunately the heterogeneous duties assigned to the SEC make it the more difficult to find another administrator who will combine Mr. Kennedy's intimate knowledge of stock-market technique with an adequate understanding of the intricate problems of holding-company regulation.

For Continued Improvement.

The current meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce recalls that of last spring, when resolutions sharply critical of Administration policies were adopted. Since that time, the friendly contacts which the Chamber formerly maintained with the White House have given place to a thinly veiled hostility. While the major blame for this cannot be attributed to the Chamber, it is none the less unfortunate.

Business men unquestionably have legitimate reasons for attacking many of the policies that are now being followed. As taxpayers they owe it to themselves and their fellow citizens to protest against such blundering experiments as the WPA, which fail to provide permanent employment while hurrying the country along a road that leads to bankruptcy. They are also justified in denouncing the mad haste with which burdensome regulatory laws have been passed, leaving no time for adjustment to new conditions before fresh uncertainties are created.

These and other grounds of complaint against Administration policies cannot be effectively refuted, as Secretary Roper seems to think, by pointing to the improvement that has occurred since President Roosevelt was inaugurated. Similar and even more pronounced business gains have been recorded in poorer countries which have not tried to achieve prosperity by application of New Deal panaceas.

Nevertheless, the Chamber of Commerce would be ill-advised if it failed to emphasize that the country is confronted by serious problems which demand constructive action of some sort. Acute unemployment is directly or indirectly responsible for most of the wasteful spending and many of the half-baked legislative experiments that have been practiced at the expense of bewildered business men. Despite the improvement of recent months the problem of putting millions of men to work remains for the most part unsolved.

The situation is not peculiar to the United States. The economic intelligence service of the League of Nations reports that after two years of recovery in many countries, world unemployment is almost twice as great as in 1929. Thus it is evident that work for the idle will not be provided within the near future by following a do-nothing policy. Business must recognize a responsibility for forwarding the absorption of the unemployed into productive industry or be prepared to witness further bungling efforts to provide jobs at the expense of taxpayers.

Of course there are limits to the obligations that can be assumed by individuals, but sometimes the impossible can be accomplished by those who have the courage to take risks in a spirit of social service as well as personal gain. Moreover, opportunities for capital investment which would increase employment can now be found. Unsatisfied demands have piled up during a long period of inactivity and new kinds of wants are awaiting discovery.

As improvement continues, there will be less and less excuse for a failure of business men to accelerate the pace of recovery, so far as it lies in their power to do so. To keep the Government within its proper sphere, private industry must be prepared to show that intrusion is unjustified. If the Chamber of Commerce recognizes that business must act as well as criticize, it will secure a much wider hearing for its views, and will therefore be much more influential in guiding the course of future legislation.

Back Of The News.

Nothing, it has been said, is as inevitable as death and taxes. But rarely are the two combined to make a macabre and fantastic story such as the one behind the prosaic announcement of an English local government unit which recently stated that half a dozen residents of the parish of Horton "now pay their rates as residents in the civil parish of Horton . . ."

Nothing could be more matter of fact than that; nothing apparently of less interest than the fact that six English villagers shall henceforth pay taxes, amounting to less than $500 annually, to the logical fiscal authority. Yet back of those routine words, the New York Times points out, are all the ingredients of a story so gruesome that it makes The Gold Bug a fairy tale by comparison.

In the thirteenth century 13 travelers (what a sop to the superstitious) were murdered at an inn near Horton and loaded onto a wagon to be dumped into the Thames. One of the bodies fell on the territory of Horton parish, and was refused burial. So the less superstitious, or more humanitarian, folk of nearby Datchet cared for the corpse. For that hard-heartedness Horton was placed under an interdiction by Edward I, burdened with an ecclesiastic curse, and the taxes—they had them then—of the area where the body was recovered were presented in perpetuity to Datchet. Now, after 600 years, the stigma has been removed, so far as the direction of the taxes is concerned.

Such a solution may be wholly satisfactory to the present authorities of Horton, but still leaves something to be desired. Even Sherlock Holmes would hardly have called this "purely elementary." How have Horton generations, suffering under ecclesiastic interdiction, prospered so that they still have the wherewithal for taxes? Does the act of the lay authorities remove the ban?

And how did Merrie England get its name with such ghastly goings-on? Or has that country, ever noted for its emphasis on conventional dining, simply dismissed the affair as a proper prerogative of the innkeeper's wife who could not bear the idea of 13 guests at table?

Spreading The Boondoggling.

A complete breakdown in the work-relief program is foreshadowed by events of the last two weeks. Substantial public improvements were virtually abandoned at the recent Hyde Park conference. Now Works Progress Administrator Hopkins has thrown down the last safeguard against the squandering of $4,880,000,000 in a fruitless fiasco intended to hoodwink the Nation into believing that constructive jobs have been or will be found for the unemployed.

Only a few months ago the Administration was pleading with Congress to eliminate from the work-relief bill the McCarran amendment requiring the payment of "prevailing wages." Its spokesmen declared that the Government could not afford to pay union rates for made work; that such a practice would discourage men from seeking private employment; that it would put the Government into competition with private enterprise. When advocates of the prevailing wage pointed out that union rates could be upheld by requiring relief workers to stay on the job only a few hours per day, the Administration properly answered that such sporadic employment would make efficient work impossible, in addition to being only an evasion of the principle involved.

Having won its case through the sheer logic of its arguments, the WPA has now reversed its stand by permitting local administrators to reduce hours of work to any minimum they may desire. In New York, Gen. Johnson immediately took advantage of the new order, and it is anticipated that other administrators will do likewise. Skilled workers whose wages must ultimately be paid by taxpayers are expected to remain on the job an equivalent of three hours per day for five days a week. With this resort to camouflaged doles, it may be just as well that few important projects are contemplated. If attempted, they certainly would be bungled.

Superficially this appears to be only a surrender of principle to the demands of organized labor, in the interests of politics. Analysis will show, however, that other motives, equally indefensible, are involved. Mr. Hopkins has set for himself the impossible task of creating 400,000 jobs each week until November 1. During the five months of its operation to date the WPA claims to have put 343,504 men to work, exclusive of those employed by the CCC and various Government departments. With that pitifully ineffectual start matched against the problem ahead, Mr. Hopkins in desperation has decided to spread the boondoggling in order to save face.

Outrageous as is this new illustration of collapse, it is in keeping with the chicanery that has been practiced from the beginning of the work-relief program. To redeem absurd pledges the WPA is entangling itself ever more hopelessly in perhaps the most egregious piece of botchery ever perpetrated by any government. For the unemployed it means a disguised dole that will only increase present demoralization; for the taxpayer it means the pointless addition of billions to the national debt, and for the public at large it means the most serious disillusionment that New Deal ineptitude has yet produced.

For The Horse And Buggy.

Observers who are trying to appraise the trend of the times are blunting their pencils analyzing the refusal of Pennsylvania voters to permit an overhauling of their State constitution. As pointed out by Eugene Pharo, in an article on the page opposite, the decision involved many conflicting motives and currents of opinion. Yet it seems to indicate a rather definite repudiation of the tendency—which Gov. Earle borrowed from the New Deal—to sweep away existing standards and institutions in favor of unpredictable experiments.

Both parties agreed that the constitution Pennsylvania adopted in 1874 contains a great deal of deadwood and is otherwise defective. Both were eager to see it amended, in line with modern requirements. Their disagreement seems to have originated from Gov. Earle's decision to sponsor a new basic law that would be fashioned after the New Deal. It is the rejection of this idea which gives national significance to the Pennsylvania primary election last Tuesday.

As a rule the States are not averse to changing their constitutions. Louisiana has had nine constitutions, Virginia six. Although three States have constitutions adopted before 1800, there have been 155 complete or partial constitutional revisions such as that which Gov. Earle proposed for Pennsylvania. Some States modify details of their basic laws almost every election. No doubt it was the type of revision proposed, rather than the mere idea of a constitutional change, that influenced the majority of the Pennsylvania voters.

A shrewd leader is one who can keep the majority following him without letting them know where he's going, thus practically eliminating the possibility that any of them will get ahead of him.

Don't be too hasty in passing harsh judgment on a man who has a red nose. It may be that he has been trying to get his money's worth out of 5-cent cigars.

Discrimination In N. Y. A.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The National Youth Administration, one of the chief agencies for spending the huge fund of $4,880,000,000 voted by Congress for work relief, was organized under an order of President Roosevelt, in which he expressed his "sincere hope that all public and private agencies, groups and organizations, as well as educators, recreational leaders, employers and labor leaders will cooperate wholeheartedly in the furtherance of the national youth program."

Harry L. Hopkins is now in responsible charge of this administration. But how is he himself co-operating with private agencies in education of the young to equip them for jobs? He has issued an order declining co-operation with private business schools—has told them they are not eligible for participation in the effort to provide young people with business education through funds of the National Youth Administration.

The big relief program on which billions are allocated to be spent would presumably provide for approximately 500,000 young people, to maintain them at schools and colleges and help them get jobs, assisting them to the extent of $6 to $15 a month. It seems a noble purpose, even if expensive. But why the amazing inconsistency of refusing to assist them if they elect to go to private business schools, those which can equip them speedily and in a practical way to get immediate good business jobs?

College education may train young people for legal, medical, teaching and some other professions, usually overcrowded or with room only at the top, but for a training that will help one to step quickly and efficiently into jobs most plentiful in business and industry there is hardly any institution that beats a private business school. Addressed To Mr. Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of September 10, Westbrook Pegler gives further currency to another of those dangerous half-truths that he was writing about when he analyzed the "Soak the Rich Program."

I am not a defender of the so-called economists or the rich, but Mr. Pegler is very definitely wrong when he states that the economists were continually reporting that nothing could be done after their repeated studies of the so-called "system" against which he, Mr. Pegler, and many others have vented their scorn. The economists, the bankers and the President, Mr. Hoover, had been telling what could be done and had been actively advocating the changes indicated to sensible people as being necessary. But the Congress and the people paid no attention to the repeated warnings, and especially Congress would not back the President with the required legislation.

Again in his last few paragraphs Mr. Pegler gives currency to the dangerous half-truths in connection with the testimony of J. P. Morgan as to the income tax paid or not paid by members of his partnership.

The law which compelled the Morgan firm upon admission of a partner in the year 1929 to value its assets at the then market price was a bad law and economists, tax experts, bankers and the responsible heads of the Government had attempted to secure an amendment of that law, but Congress ignored these recommendations. The same law was in effect in 1930 and the Morgans again admitted a partner (this may have been 1931, but the effect is just the same). Again the Morgan partnership was required by the law to revalue its assets. But this time the market was down and these values which had been high but untrue in 1929 were low and untrue at the date of this required valuation.

This same law made it possible, permissible and entirely legal for such losses to be carried over and charged against the profits of the two following years.

Naturally these following years were not profitable years and the losses which were just as arbitrary as the profits were required by law and good common sense to be deducted from or offset against those meager profits for the purpose of computing the income tax payable to the Government.

Electricity Vs. Integrity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has become quite the fashion to make much of the new so-called social frontiers as a challenge to youth. As a substitute for creating wealth by adding brain, brawn, ambition and untiring industry to untouched natural resources, our young men are offered the enticing prospect of loftier careers in pleasant air-conditioned office buildings, contriving devious and cunning ways to squander in the name of social progress the wealth that a hardier generation piled up with prodigious labor and sacrifice.

The absurdity of confiscating this wealth, amassed by pioneers who never knew one-tenth the comfort of a modern slum, and who built an empire without the aid of electricity or modern bathrooms, to give the luxuries of mechanical civilization to the descendants of those who earned it not, never occurs to these solemn sponsors of the new crusade. And since, as they tell us, the old frontiers have vanished, and there are no new sources of virgin wealth to be tapped, where, we wonder, is the money coming from to continue these blessings to humanity when the present fortunes have been entirely destroyed?

The assumption behind all this propaganda for social improvement is that by raising the standard of material conveniences we shall automatically become a happy and law-abiding Nation. Has it come to the point where really intelligent people believe that electricity in the farm homes of the Dillingers, the Barkers and the Floyds would have made any difference in our criminal history, or that model tenements could make model citizens of the offscourings of the slums?

It is this tendency to consider these trappings of modern civilization as supreme saviors of mankind, and the furthering of these excellent objectives as tantamount to the spread of the Gospel, which furnishes grave food for thought to those interested in the coming generations. Is a project like the TVA, for instance, to be held up to our youth as one of those social frontiers worthy of their best thought and mettle — a project conceived and carried out with utter disregard for the principles of business?

What would happen to a private corporation if it went into the territory of an established competitive business, and by means of superior credit and financial resources deliberately destroyed that business, recompensing its stockholders not one penny? Is this kind of financial chicanery, actually perpetrated by our national Government in the name of social progress, to be held up as a laudable enterprise to our ambitious youth? Is it our new national religion that electricity is more valuable than integrity? Is there not a very obvious connection between the increasing tendency to take that which one has not earned, and the new philosophy of government which transgresses every law of private property on a more colossal scale?

Yes, our frontiers have vanished. There are no more Indians to kill, no more virgin lands to exploit. But we have the more splendid social frontiers. There are still some life savings to be swept away, many thrifty and hard-working citizens to be reduced to poverty, hosts of willing workers to be deprived of self-support because the sources of work have been mulcted by decree. And this business is called social betterment.

No, my son has no more opportunity to be a pioneer as his grandfather was. He will never help to build a city in the wilderness to the accompaniment of the coyote's howl, nor will he have to kill a nest of rattlesnakes to lay the foundations of the first business house in a vast new section of country. The satisfaction of conquest, the pride of his children, the esteem of the community for a builder of industry will never be his.

But the God of his pioneer fathers forbid that he shall ever deem it a worthy substitute to become a swivel-chair Robin Hood!

"Help Clean Our City."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is civic pride dead in Washington? For some time I have been viewing Washington's gutters, parks and lawns with growing disgust. Will you tell me why, when the Government here gives out thousands of dollars weekly to idle men, these men are not put to some real and necessary work and clean our filthy streets? Why should the merchants on F and G streets take no civic pride in keeping their pavements clean?

I myself will boycott any store whose pavement is unswept; if they have no civic pride they deserve to be boycotted. Why cannot Washington set an example and be called "spotless" instead of the dirtiest city in the world? Our parks need trimming—sit in Lafayette square; sit in Farragut square and on the awful walks, benches—and then see thousands of men on relief not lifting a hand!

If I were handling the relief fund, I would say to each man, "Help to clean up our city, or no money," and my first work would be on the parks and gutters.

Unheralded, Unsung.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a reader of The Post and also a listener of the radio. As I have been a shut-in for ten weeks, this has been my pastime. I want to ask The Post and the managers of the radio programs why there has never been a word or a bugle sound or a song dedicated to the poor veterans who lost their lives in the hurricane at Key West, Fla.

I think there should be homage of some kind shown to mothers and friends of these men who had to leave their dear ones and go through hell twice. A SYMPATHIZER.

The Post Impressionist

More Sokoloff Re Women

Post Office, Saturday.

REGARDING womankind there should be a Post-postscript added to Doctor Aspenwall's columnar comments on Prof. Sokoloff's book.

In his letter to the Post-Impressionist, the Boston physician cited certain traits among women of other nations which he considered—to put it mildly—superior to the dominant traits of American women. In that new book of his on "The Achievement of Happiness," the new York professor—once a member of Kerensky's Russion government — himself notes several matters wherein he holds the women of the old Russia superior to the present women of these United States.

Dr. Sokoloff, while admitting that "the romanticism of American women needs no proof," believes they are as yet loath to make sacrifices for it:

"There is much that distinguishes the Russian Anna Karenina from her American sister."

He attributes the qualities of the Russian woman to her education and "the ideal of womanhood which had been built up in Russian literature. Nearly every book, article, story or play emphasized the positive role that woman plays in love and the family and, consequently, in the general development of society."

Through that medium she is seen, not—as our professor seems to think the American woman generally is—as a mere "object of luxury and amusement. She created the family" and, by "her love and tenderness," maintained it as the social unit. She was never depicted inferior to man; she was generally regarded as morally and intellectually his superior—because "she was capable of love such as man can never know." She was a "very incarnation of love": love for individual men, for women, for humanity.

What she learned, and what Dr. Sokoloff believes the American woman has not discovered, was that "life is inseparable from love." And the verb "to love" didn't, says he, imply leisure or laziness, either.

As often as not, the Russian woman was a wage earner. Long before the World War, business was open, in Russia, to women, and they entered it by the thousands. Among the professions, Dr. Sokoloff recalls that medicine was particularly attractive to them.

"Medical training for women," says he, in a note, "was very popular . . . before the Revolution. The percentage of women among the physicians was much higher in Russia than in most countries."

They made, he recalls, brilliant surgeons, gynecologists and bacteriologists.

But they remained true to the old Russian literary standard.

In other words, they were "on a pedestal!" Prof. Sokoloff doesn't dodge that term.

On the contrary, he says that this position imposed upon these fair statues certain obligations. And he contends that the statue seldom shirked them.

The old Russian novelists, even Turgenev, wasted small space on descriptions of their heroines' physical appearance—gave far more words to their "moral and spiritual qualities." And Dr. Sokoloff thinks that therein also the woman of life imitated the woman of literature: she "set greater value upon her soul."

This, he reasons, "gradually developed an ideal of love which was shared, to a greater or less extent by all cultured women in Russia." It was so strong that it has endured: "After many years of exile, it still is adhered to . . . and is even influencing the younger generation, who left their country as children."

And what is the result—as Dr. Sokoloff sees it?

Scorning light love affairs, they won't trade love for comfort or career—won't let public opinion, social or economic barriers, balk it. Far from breaking it for a trifle, "they fight to preserve it, even when the fight is useless." Always emotional, sometimes sensual, "they are spiritual first of all."

Untouched by skepticism, these women "are very intuitive . . . Their ideal is one great romantic love to last a lifetime . . . They are not afraid of suffering, for they have been taught that it is a necessary concomitant of love . . . Strict and cautious when not in love, when in love they throw caution to the winds." In short, concludes the professor, "they are convinced that love is the most precious thing in life."

Dr. Sokoloff does wonder whether these Russian women don't "treat love with almost too great solicitude." But he thinks that, at the present stage of her development, the American woman errs on the other side.

What the Post-Impressionist wonders is what the American woman thinks of Dr. Sokoloff's thoughts.

Advice Is Aviators.

New York, Sept. 20.

THERE has been a spirited response to my recent shy inquiry as to why transport airplanes fall down notwithstanding plush, tasty interior decorations, luncheon trays at 15,000 feet and pretty hostesses. The best answer was submitted by a woman, who, in the exercise of her natural prerogative, disregards the restraints of consistent argument and takes both sides of the question. The others are one-sided.

Gertrude M. Dion begins by saying that insurance companies give aerial transport lower rates than any other form of transportation; goes on to denounce James A. Farley for loading the executive staffs of certain lines with ignoramuses and speaks of "dozens of crashes" that were never published.

"As for the Boeing crash in California," Mrs. Dion says, "the human error factor is obvious. The warming-up of the motors should have shown they were not right. If the pilot failed to catch the trouble it is probable that it was because he took off before they were adequately warmed up."

A reasonable explanation, to be sure, but not very comforting, considering that the engines were reported to have been overhauled just before this flight and that sufficient warming-up would seem to be a routine precaution.

• • • •

"THE two tri-motored ships that shook their engines loose were Fords," the letter continues. "The last Ford was built no less than five years ago. If they weren't darned good ships not one would be flying today. But you can't expect them to last forever."

From this I gather that five years is a dangerous age for a transport, at which engines may be expected to pop out now and again, but that the ship is safe until the engines do pop out.

"The whole industry knows that certain lines have suffered from 'executive trouble' ever since Jim Farley's grand gesture forced them to oust their original staffs and accept men with little or no aviation knowledge," Mrs. Dion continues.

"When the swivel chair gentlemen got too big for their hats and they and their public relations bureaus started tampering with operations, things began to happen. When complacent ignoramuses in the drivers' seats tell the poor devils in the operations department that they have to live up to all the poppycock it's time something was done about it.

"The cherished radio beam is a case in point. No one can deny that it is an improvement over dead reckoning, but some radio beacons are known to deflect as much as 60 degrees from true direction. There is only one device that is 100 per cent accurate, but only millionaires can afford it. The inventor would tell you that it could be made available to every line in the country if he could get a square deal from certain bureaucrats in Washington."

She says flying is the safest mode of travel, but some of the ships are too old and the industry in general is beset by executive ignorance and bureaucratic villainy which prevent the general adoption of a homing device which is 100 per cent efficient—all to the peril of the passengers and crews.

• • • •

J. J. ALLEN, of Pittsburgh, says there are dangerous obstructions at the airports in Newark, Chicago, Detroit and Washington, and that either the obstructions or the airports should be moved. Of course, the Washington airport, he says, is notorious, but politicians have defeated every effort to improve or move it, and nothing will be done until a shipload of people are cremated, if then.

Gen. "Bill" Mitchell, who was eased out of the Army for speaking his mind on air defense, disagrees with the woman whose criticism of Mr. Farley suggests a serene confidence in the altruism of the original master minds of the air lines.

"The whole structure of our commercial aviation has been built on a speculative foundation," Gen. Mitchell writes. "Thirty-seven manipulators received the money from the Government, then lined their own pockets. Equipment, operation and development are secondary matters. The great development program that we inaugurated after the war was thrown into the discard. Aeronautically incompetent persons have the deciding voice everywhere. There is not a suitable airplane or engine for passenger traffic in use in America.

• • • •

"A MODERN passenger airplane should, among other things, be equipped with:

"1. Diesel non-inflammable engines.

"2. Automatic gyroscopic pilots that work.

"3. Resonance altimeters that tell how far the ground is underneath, not the column of air overhead.

"4. Cabin parachutes that will take all the passengers at once when necessary.

"5. Defrosting equipment.

"6. Landing sticks 30 feet long that will land the ship when they touch the ground.

"7. Wholly redesigned ships that are sound aerodynamically and operationally, which none of the present ones are.

"The trouble here is that all matters relating to air are controlled by non-flying outfits and that the air profiteers, with their money, control to a great extent the press and are able through their lobbies to get next to Washington."

Monuments To Food

By

William Lyon Phelps

OSCAR WILDE said, "I hate people who are not serious about their meals," and one of many agreeable things about traveling in France is that the inhabitants take cooking and eating seriously. Every French soldier is an accomplished cook, and even in remote French inns one will often be served with an excellent meal.

I have just discovered that five permanent statues to food and the art of eating are to be found in France.

Near the City of Lyons and not far from Aix-le-Bains is the Roman town of Belley, where Brillat-Savarin was born. He wrote a book called, "The Physiology of Taste," which has been translated into English. He died in 1826, and a statue was erected to him in Belley to commemorate the 100th anniversary of his death. One of his famous remarks about food is, "Good food is not a matter of money but of manner."

Camembert Cheese has a monument, erected in honor of Mme. Marie Harel, who invented it.

The famous port of Le Havre has a monument to sugar in honor of the vast amount of sugar that passes through. In Hautvillers, near Rheims, is a monument to Don Perignon, who over 250 years ago found a way of putting the fizz into sparkling wines.

In a park in the City of Strasbourg is a statue in honor of "foie gras." The statue takes the pleasant form of a girl feeding a goose.

Quaker Referendum

Its National Significance, Clouded By Local Issues, Determinable Only Through Political Approach, Observer Says.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia, Sept. 20.

IT is almost impossible for an unbiased observer to draw definite conclusions as to the national significance of Pennsylvania's rejection, in Tuesday's primaries, of a proposal to revise its State constitution.

Democrats naturally insist that the situation was entirely State or local. Independents are seemingly puzzled as to its wider meanings. Organization Republicans stand alone in claiming national significance for the results. By so doing they are placed in the paradoxical position of welcoming the defeat of a revision that their own platform, at the last general election, pledged them to bring about as soon as it was "feasible."

Evidently the G. O. P. and a number of independent voters decided that it was not feasible to bring about such revision while the State administration is in the hands of those who are frankly in accord with New Deal philosophy. In this attitude alone does there seem to be any reflection of a national attitude.

M. Harvey Taylor, State chairman of the Republican Party stated, following determination of the result, that the vote "indicates that Pennsylvania stands strongly opposed to the New Deal and to experimentation in government."

ONE of the more liberal Republicans who voted against revision, told me that his vote was determined purely on the basis of his distrust of the present State administration and some of its social security ambitions. He denied having given any thought to national implications, although, upon facing the question directly, he expressed insistence upon knowing just what constitutional changes the Roosevelt Administration would propose, before thinking of lending it his vote a second time.

Opposition to revision, as it is described in the newspapers most strongly in favor of a change, is placed upon conservative political interests. These are opposed to any modifications that might shift to their shoulders a greater burden of taxation. These are opposed to the increased obligations of the type of social security legislation that a revised constitution would make probable.

This distaste, combined with distrust planted successfully in the minds of up-State voters—whether by straight arguments, or, as charged by the Democratic press, through chicanery and misrepresentation—adequately explains the defeat of the local proposal. Its mental kinship with the opposition that has developed toward President Roosevelt's own program, combined with Governor Earle's parallelism of Roosevelt's opportunistic willingness to change old laws to deal with current situations, seems to mean something.

THAT this meaning is not clear-cut and decisive is, however, indicated by several factors. Among these is an increase in the sentiment for revision shown by what Gov. Earle asserts is half a million more votes in its favor than were cast at the 1924 general election, at which it was voted upon and defeated. The exact basis for his count is not apparent in the figures that have been made public.

Another confusing factor is the circumstance that in seven counties, and those the most fully informed on the local issues at stake, revision did win. These included Philadelphia and Allegheny counties (including Philadelphia and Pittsburgh); Berks, a large farming county; Elk, Erie, Lackawanna, and Beaver. It is claimed in an exceedingly bitter editorial that appeared in Thursday's Philadelphia Record, that more counties would have been in the favorable column had not the Grundy machine spread malicious rumors and misrepresentations through rural regions at the last moment, when there was neither time nor opportunity to refute them.

Philadelphia's own vote for revision was heavier than the total vote for the Democratic candidate for mayor, behind whom virtually the entire support of the party was mobilized. Thus it indicated a noticeable percentage of independent Republican support. Moreover a large proportion of the independent and Democratic vote was not called out, there being no contests, such as existed in the Republican primaries, to make their votes necessary.

Need for revision, or abolition, of the magistrate system was one of the strongest factors in winning support for revision in Philadelphia. Relief of real estate from an undue proportion of the total tax burden was another.

The president of the Philadelphia Real Estate Board expressed the latter reason, following the election, putting into words some of the reasons why, its proponents believe, more of the upstate votes would have been in favor of revision had the project been more fully explained there.

"The defeat," said the real estate spokesman, Joseph J. Greenberg, "marks but the first skirmish of a battle that will be carried on vigorously, aggressively, and unrelentingly until the property owner is accorded the consideration to which he is entitled.

"Unless we misinterpret the vote on revision in Philadelphia, it is a forerunner of disaster for those who made a political issue of this question."

• • • •

GOV. EARLE'S reaction was recorded in an interview printed in the Philadelphia Record, which is an uncompromising exponent of the policies and program of the current State administration.

"The encouraging vote for a constitutional convention was registered," the Governor said, in part, "in spite of the fact that the referendum occurred at a primary complicated by bitterly contested local issues and lengthy ballots which resulted in congestion at the polls and disenfranchisement of hundreds of thousands of voters.

"The Republican majority in the Senate is to be blamed for submission of this all-important question of a constitutional convention at the primary.

"My administration proposed a special election at which the issue would have been clean-cut—at which only the referendum would have been considered . . ."

His statement concluded with the assertion that the fight for revision would be continued energetically, on behalf of "old-age pensions, widowed mothers' pension, unemployment insurance . . . home owners, farmers and small businessmen who are today being crushed by the burden of taxation and who can only be relieved by constitutional reform which will shift the load upon those best able to pay."

That quotation probably gives the most authentic note of all in appraising the general alignments revealed by the election. And it affords as reliable a guide as can be obtained for judging the national significance of the fight and its result.

Since this brief account endeavors to be strictly impartial, the writer will refrain from attempting to estimate what that significance is. The political sympathies of the reader will probably determine the matter, anyway.

Gov. Nice Silent On Rudy Charges

Motor Official Says Ouster Move 'Dirty Business.'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 20.—While Gov. Nice declined today to discuss a demand for the removal of Walter R. Rudy as commissioner of motor vehicles, Rudy branded the ouster move as a "dirty piece of business."

The governor said he had not received a letter from Willis R. Jones, counsel for the Maryland Classified Employes Association, in which Jones reportedly set forth a series of charges against Rudy.

Jones' charges involved alleged violation of the merit system and restoration of a driver's license to an automobile operator convicted of drunken driving. The latter accusation was brought by Milton W. Schlutter, suspended legal examiner.

'Shipwreck'

By

Ralph E. Renaud.

At The World's Top.

New York.

THE New York police are now the champion flagpole sitters of the world. They have pushed Shipwreck Kelly, than whom etcetera, from his pedestal. To be sure, they took their title, much like Max Schmeling, on a foul. But they were not in such a completely horizontal position as the Max occupied and were prepared, for the occasion, to do a little flagpole climbing of their own.

It all happened this way. Nobody has ever been able to discover why Shipwreck Kelly likes to sit on flagploes, but he does. He tried other occupations, including bulging into a dress suit and acting as guest-host in a dance hall. But he hasn't been happy. And recently, now that things are, as it were, looking up a little, he has returned to his first love. It can't be said that Shipwreck's exploits have had New York exactly by the ears and not long ago he had to climb down from one of his perches for lack of attention. But that was in the sophisticated Broadway region where everybody is looking in the gutter for a lost nickel.

Up in the Bronx the aspect is more rural and people are accustomed to recognize any miracle which happens to come along. So Shipwreck set out there to break his own record of 7 weeks 1 hour in the sky. He selected a flagpole at a busy interesection near Fordham University and exhibited himself for all the world to see with the announcement that he was going to stay there two months.

Now just at the moment that police are conducting a rather successful safety campaign. They felt it might be a little difficult for motorists in the street to observe the red light and Shipwreck Kelly at the same time. But they were somewhat puzzled as to what charge to lodge against the human skyscraper. After some head-scratching they decided to charge him with violating the sanitary code, though nobody is exactly aware of just how the sailor does that. He certainly enjoys plenty of fresh air and his plumbing arrangements are strictly open.

• • • •

ANYWAY, Magistrate Anna Kross issued a summons. Shipwreck Kelly thumbed his nose at the majesty of the law and said he wouldn't come down. He wouldn't even descend to argument and informed the police ambassadors that if they tried to come up and get him he would grease the pole. This, in the eyes of the department, constituted an outright challenge.

That was on a Monday. The secret archives of the police department will alone reveal whether between then and Friday the nimbler bluecoats practiced pole climbing or whether they decided to run in a few ringers from the fire department. But on Friday, the police emergency squad, with a flourish of sirens, dashed up to the site of Kelly's perch with every indication that they were Hellbent-for-Heaven.

At the moment Shipwreck was just hoisting a can of grease to his platform with obviously nefarious intentions. But as he looked down at the roof his eyes rested on a gleaming saw in the hands of one of the police sky squad. His intrepid spirit faltered. Instead of rapidly and efficiently applying his grease where it would do the most good he began to negotiate. It is a great pity. The police wouldn't have sawed the pole down for that would have been mayhem, or a violation of the sanitary code, or something. And it would have been a noble sight in the Bronx or anywhere else to see several muscular preservers of the peace swarming, or attempting to swarm, up that greased pole.

"I might as well come down," sighed Shipwreck Kelly mournfully.

He did and he was found guilty of violating the sanitary code, though sentence was suspended. But if you know Shipwreck Kelly, he'll soon be sitting on top of the world again.

THE latest fashion note scintillates from the perfumers' convention here. On the theory that "glamorous evenings need glamorous women" the cosmeticians have decreed green eyeshading and mascara with perhaps a sprinkle of gold or silver "star dust" to enhance the come-hither look. Miss Madeline Darling, of Vogue, was the exponent of the green make-up and attributed her inspiration to the current Italian influence. It seems only fair to your correspondent to give the current Ethiopian influence an equal break, but it probably won't be done.

Another shocking revelation was the announcement of new refinements in cosmetics for men, including a liquid face powder in seven colors. One of the colors, it is said, will enable the male of the species to obtain an inexpensive Florida tan without recourse to sunshine or grease paint. All colors are not to be used at once unless it is desired to stimulate the expensive effect of an all-night party. This would be regarded in the best circles, however, as rather vulgar ostentation.

The Once Over

The Summer Hotel Hostess Speaks.

I don't care a hoot if you're lonesome,
I don't give a damn if you're sad;
Who cares if you're having a grand time
Or whether you're having a bad?
Nobody on earth's more indifferent
To anyone's summons or call,
For I am a summer place hostess

II.

Just what are your plans for diversion?
(I hope that your prospects are low);
Would riding or dancing intrigue you?
(Don't tell me; I don't want to know);
Would bridge or a concert attract you?
Is life as you find it quite flat?
Who cares? As a summer place hostess
I'm glad to be through with all that.

III.

You'd like to find someone to golf with—
Somebody who doesn't break par?
You'd love to go out to the races—
If you knew a man with a car?
You're seeking my help "as a hostess"?
My dear, when you call me that smile!
To hell with your troubles and worries—
I'm through with that stuff for a while.

IV.

What's that? You would like to go hiking
With someone congenial and nice?
A romp in the fields in the morning
With any nice boy would suffice?
I hear your entreaties quite clearly—
They leave me as hard as a rock;
My cry to the world in September
Is simply, "Go jump off the dock!"

No Conflict in Dates.

It is now fairly evident that the war between Italy and Ethiopia won't be produced until after the world series and the Baer-Louis fight.

Hitler has abolished the old German flag and made the swastika the official flag of the nation. This simplifies matters so a German won't have to phone headquarters for instructions whenever it's flag day.

Religious Life Unit to Launch Winter Program at Mass Parley

Secretary Hull to Speak at Constitution Hall on October 2.

Organized to mobilize and strengthen the spiritual forces in Washington, the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital moved this week to launch its winter program.

Taking quarters at 1229 Connecticut avenue the group, representing Catholic, Protestant, Jewish and other organized religious bodies, yesterday reported it had furthered plans for the send-off event. This will be a mass meeting October 2 in Constitution Hall. Secretary of State Cordell Hull will be the principal speaker.

Addressing a coast-to-coast radio audience, as well as the Washingtonians who will assemble in the hall, Secretary Hull will call upon all churchmen to unite for a common purpose.

Stressing the work of the committee in Washington, leaders of the movement pointed out that spiritual forces needed strengthening because of "their influence on the ideals and standards of the Federal Government, and for their effect on the whole Nation.

"About one-fifth of the population of the District is related to service in the Federal or District Governments, and probably half the population has never been actively related to any organized religious body. Many allow their relationships to cease when leaving their former homes to take up residence here," said Henry C. Barden, executive secretary.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, is chairman of the committee's board of officers. The Rev. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church; Mgr. Edward L. Buckey, pastor of St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church, and Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of Washington Hebrew Congregation, are vice chairmen.

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, is treasurer, and the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of Washington Cathedral, is secretary.

Postlude

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert in the new Government Auditorium by the Interstate Male Chorus, Clyde B. Aitchison, conductor; Robert Frederick Freund, barytone soloist. Program: "Worship of God in Nature" (Beethoven), "Castilla" (Protheroe), "Passing By" (Purcell-Saar), "Invitation" (Hoffman-Smith), "Concordi Laetitia" (14th century hymn), "Camel-Drivers' Chorus" from "Rebecca" (Franck), "Dreams" (Beschnitt), "Ships in Harbor" and "In Transit" (Franz Bornschein), "Goin' Home" (Dvorak-Fisher), "Bells of Shandon" (George Nevin), "Forest Harps" (Schultz). Barytone solos: "Vision Fugitive" (Massenet), "Hills of Gruzia" (Mednikov), "Nocturne" (Curran), "Mountains" (Rasbach).

Entering upon its sixteenth season, the Interstate Male Chorus had the honor last night of giving the first concert in the new Government Auditorium, which was well filled with an appreciative audience of invited guests. Although reduced in numbers by the temporary absence of ten members, the organization maintained its useful standard of ensemble singing in a program which presented divers styles and periods of composition.

Of the works offered, the most effectively performed were Protheroe's "Mastilla," Louis Saar's arrangement of Purcell's "Passing By," by Deems Taylor's arrangement of the medieval hymn, "Concordi Laetitia;" Franz Bornschein's setting of H. L. Mencken's youthful poem, "Ships in Harbor," and Frank J. Smith's transformation of the "Papillon Waltz," by Carl Hoffman. The auditors liked so well the subdued dynamics of the Purcell selection that the last strophe had to be repeated.

"In Transit," which received its first public performance from manuscript, is a lively and somewhat modernistic treatment of the hobo theme. Inasmuch as the text was not included in the printed program, one had to neglect the half-heard words and extract the humor from the music. This was no strain, for Mr. Bornschein has written a cleverly devised score. The Baltimore composer was present to hear the premiere, and arose to acknowledge the applause.

Accustomed to less ample space for vocal projection, the chorus seemed to experience some difficulty in adapting fortes and pianissimos to the lofty, pillared hall. One cannot, therefore, pronounce definitely upon the acoustic quality of the new auditorium, although Mr. Freund attained a ringing resonance in more than one of his solos. After withholding his voice a little in the Massenet aria, he released its sonority to better effect in the group of lyrics.

Home Teaching Plan Launched By D.C. Church

Dr. Clinchy's Program Aims to Supplement Sabbath Lesson.

Two new plans for increasing the interest of all members and their friends in the personal discussion of moral and religious problems, and to promote knowledge of its program among newer residents of Washington, have been adopted by the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church. The plans will become effective during the first week in October.

Supplementing the discussion of religious problems as presented in his Sunday sermons, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, D. D., pastor, has started the organization of small, neighborhood round table conferences, to be held in the homes of parish members. Dr. Clinchy's purpose is to give all of his parishioners and their friends who are not members of the parish, an opportunity for a better understanding of general religious questions, and also to help solve their individual problems.

People who have recently become residents of Washington, and who are interested in the work of liberal churches, will have an opportunity to become acquainted with the program of the Mount Pleasant Church under a plan adopted by the church organization officers. Under the direction of Dr. Clinchy, individual members of the parish will interview such new residents, and give them an opportunity to participate in the program.

At the morning service in Mount Pleasant Church tomorrow, Dr. Clinchy will speak on "Undusted Souls."

Cleveland Park Congregational Church. The Rev. Joseph S. Loughran, pastor. Mr. Loughran will preach at 11 a. m. on "Christianity and the Civilization of Today." The church school will reopen its sessions at 9:45 a. m.

First Congregational Church. The Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, D. D., pastor. Dr. Stockdale will preach tomorrow morning on "The Second Miller."

The Departmentalized Sunday School will resume its program tomorrow, and the Calvin Coolidge Men's Class will open meetings for the fall.

R. M. Hopkins To Be Speaker Here Thursday

Church School Dinner to Be Held in National City Christian.

Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, secretary of the World's Sunday School Association, New York, will be guest and speaker at an annual church school dinner Thursday night in National City Christian Church. The church school orchestra will furnish music, and several classes will give dramatic sketches.

Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor, occupying his pulpit at both services tomorrow, will preach on "The World's Appeal to the Church" at 11 a. m., and on "Ethiopia—the Last Stand of the Minority" tomorrow evening. Special music will feature each service.

Ninth Street Christian Church. The Rev. Clifford H. Jope, pastor. The annual "School Days" program will be presented at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow. The service will include special numbers by church and Sunday school departments, and will point to the reopening of public schools Monday.

"Redemption in Christ" will be the subject of Dr. Jope's sermon at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

H Street Christian Church. The Rev. C. N. Williams, pastor. At Lord's Supper and sermon service tomorrow morning Mr. Williams will preach on "Has the Church Lost Its Hearth?"

Columbia Heights Christian Church. The Rev. A. P. Wilson, pastor. The morning topic will be "The Proposal of Jesus for the Church." In it the pastor will continue his series, begun last Sunday, on impressions gained from a trip abroad. In the evening Mr. Wilson will preach on "The Stone That Became a Rock."

Potomac Heights Community Church. The Rev. O. J. Randall, pastor. The pastor will preach on "What I Saw in a Dream," at 11 a. m. services. At 8 p. m. he will present an illustrated talk on "Religious Aspects of the Trip Through Canada." Mrs. Harlan will sing.

Nearly 800 Apply At State College

Session Opens Monday at Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20.—With a greater number of advance applications for admission than in any similar period in its history, the Fredericksburg State Teachers College will open Monday for the 1935-36 session.

Registrations today were nearing the 800 mark. At the like period last year only 629 students had applied to attend the institution.

Despite completion of three new dormitories and an addition to one of the old buildings, indications now are that all available space will be taken and an old residence formerly occupied by one of the college professors is being turned into a dormitory.

Bill McCormick looks 'em over . . .

● Joe Louis and Maxie Baer will crawl through the ropes in the Yankee Stadium Tuesday evening. One of them . . . probably . . . will be carried out on a stretcher, for this fight will be the biggest battle since Tunney slapped Dempsey all over that Chicago ring in 1927. During this week, millions of Americans will go quietly mad trying to figure out whether Louis will kayo Baer, or whether Maxie will settle Joe's hash.

● Bill McCormick, The Washington Post's boxing expert, is now viewing these two fighters at their training camps. And, of course, Bill wil be covering the battle Tuesday evening. His account of the actual fight will be the next best thing to a ringside seat.

● McCormick's stories of training camp activities are now running daily in

FROM THE LIPS OF THE DELIRIOUS BAGSTER COMES THE STRANGE STORY OF THE "LOUIS D'OR" TREASURE
BACK IN 1760 A STRANGE EXPERIENCE BEFELL AN OLD MILLER WHO RAN A CRUDE MILL IN THE FOREST ALONG THE RED GORGE RIVER..... ONE NIGHT DURING A STORM A BAND OF FIVE STRANGERS CLATTERED UP, THEIR HORSES DRAWING A HEAVY CURTAINED CARRIAGE AND - A CANNON.
THEIR LEADER WAS A HUGE, ONE-EYED MAN THEY CALLED "LE DIABLE"..... AFTER HURRIED INQUIRIES THEY ANNOUNCED THEY WERE GOING TO CROSS THE RIVER - APPARENTLY TO AVOID THE MAIN ROAD- ALTHOUGH THE RIVER WAS SWOLLEN WITH SPRING FRESHETS AND WAS WELL-NIGH IMPASSABLE.....
WARNED TO KEEP TO HIS MILL THE OLD MILLER COWERED INSIDE..... HE HEARD THEM HEWING DOWN TREES AND BUILDING RAFTS ON WHICH THEY LOADED THEIR CARRIAGE AND CANNON.....HOURS LATER HE SAW THEM SPUR THEIR HORSES INTO THE MAD WATERS, DRAGGING THE RAFTS BEHIND.....WHEN SUDDENLY THERE WERE SHOTS AND OATHS AND THE FIGURE OF LE DIABLE APPEARED ON SHORE WITH BLAZING PISTOLS.....
THE MILLER RAN TO HIS BED.....BEFORE LONG THERE WAS HAMMERING ON HIS DOOR..... BEFORE HIM STOOD "LE DIABLE" ANNOUNCING WITH A WICKED LEER THAT HIS COMRADES HAD DESERTED HIM, AND DANGLING A BAG OF GOLDPIECES HE COMMANDED—
"I WANT YOUR HORSES, YOUR WAGON! AND THE CLOTHES YOU ARE WEARING! — AND HERE'S GOLD TO PAY YOU TEN TIMES OVER!"

Cream Found That Cleanses And Refreshes

It Has Effect of Facial Without Half of Trouble and Expense.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

RELAXING! Refreshing! Cleansing! That's the low-down on a grand new cream on sale at a local store. According to the enthusiastic salesgirl, it does something far more drastic than merely cleanse — it purges!

This cream will lift the impurities right out of your skin. Its unusual chemical formula is death on blackheads, enlarged pores and other unsightly blemishes which play havoc with a girl's appearance. It has the same effect as a facial, without being half so troublesome or expensive. It relaxes taut muscles and tightens flabby ones (all in due time, of course—you mustn't expect miracles overnight).

We especially recommend it for fall use, when so many skins are harsh and dried out from frequent exposure to burning summer suns. It will restore valuable natural oils to the most parched complexion. By stimulating the circulation, it helps to do away with sluggish conditions, which make for paleness and pastiness. Its price is not commensurate with its qualities, for it costs only $1 a jar.

Gift Shop Novelties.

THE OTHER DAY in our wanderings we drifted into a Connecticut avenue gift shop intending to stay a few minutes and remained almost an hour, so interested were we in the unusual objects on display. This particular shop is the local branch of a New York store famed for its attractive and novel importations.

Here are some of the items that made a hit with shophounds:

A combination candlestick and flower floater, which is a love. Made of purest crystal, it should add a dashing note to the most drab diningroom table. Laid on one end, it has a receptacle for buds; set upright, it holds a candle.

Truly artistic are the ceramic figures imported from France. They are made in the form of a charming, saucy little girl, with voluminous skirts which stand out breezily in front. The colors are gay and lively. The little girls are not only ornamental, but useful as well, for they come as flowerholders and bookends.

Particularly attractive are the combination flower pots and bookends which come in a stunning red clay. These are great space savers, and the last word in decorative novelties.

A Tip for Hostesses.

IN THESE MERRY times, a hostess is known by the drinks she serves. If they're tastful and refreshing, her guests will come again and again. If they're lukewarm and watery, she'll find herself spending many an evening at home all alone.

Ice is to a drink what love is to the movies. Without it, a drink is a sure-fire flop. With it, a drink becomes watery. All in all, quite a problem, but we think we've found the answer.

A local store has some little gold and silver balls which contain water. These are placed in the icebox, and after the water freezes, they are popped into the drinks. They can be used over and over again, and come six in a box for $2.50. Guaranteed not to dilute the drinks.

Gardenia Dusting Powder.

A GREAT BIG box of gardenia dusting powder, as delicate and fragrant as the flower itself, is on sale at a downtown department store for $1. It is done up in a stunning box of white and gold, decorated with white ribbon and a string of lovely artificial white gardenias, which you can use later as decoration on hat or dress.

Economic Views Will Govern Women's Vote in 1936 Race; Mass Movement Is Unlikely

By Malvina Lindsay.

THE QUESTION of the woman's vote for 1936 is being rapidly injected into the political picture. Mrs. George B. Simmons, Missouri farmer's wife, famous for her "grass roots Republicanism" has been proposed as a Vice Presidential candidate by Mrs. Jean O'Haver Shassere, steel executive, who says Mrs. Simmons will command the woman's vote "down to the last woman." Meanwhile, in both parties exponents of this, that and the other issue are making their usual claims of feminine support.

* * * *

If Mrs. Simmons is the most outstanding candidate the Republicans have for Vice President then she should be nominated without a doubt. But her party leaders need not delude themselves with any hope that she will dominate the woman's vote merely because she is a woman.

* * * *

It is absurd to speak of the woman's vote in mass form, and it is especially absurd to speak of it in support of a woman candidate, who far more than a man would be subjected to the keen-eyed and even jealous appraisal of her sex. Neither party will gain materially in feminine votes by putting up a woman candidate, desirable though such recognition of women's political service might be. For the type of women who have any sense of sex solidarity, namely, those who work together in organizations, are too independent in their thinking to put aside political beliefs to support a candidate merely because she happens to be a woman.

THE WOMAN'S VOTE has long been an interesting subject of speculation. When woman suffrage first was granted many men politicians quakingly expected women to rush to the polls en masse in support of all sorts of blue laws and weird political reforms. Men cynics expected them to go on an orgy of voting for movie type heroes and Beau Brummels. Both sets of prophets were disappointed. Up to 1928 at least the woman's vote, as far as could be determined, divided on about the same lines as men's.

* * * *

However, some general tendencies in women's political influence have manifested themselves in the Nation. In 1916 women's reactions—both in suffrage and non-suffrage States—to the Woodrow Wilson campaign slogan, "He Kept Us Out of War," had a definite influence on election results. In 1928 the prohibition issue—to say nothing of several minor social ones—threw strong feminine support to Herbert Hoover. However, the theory that women could be counted upon inevitably to support so-called moral planks in party platforms was upset in 1932, when a modernized version of the full dinner pail slogan overshadowed in the minds of a large part of the feminine electorate the Democrats' repeal stand.

* * * *

In view of all this, what can be expected in 1936? Has either party an issue that will line up any consequential feminine bloc?

LATER developments may determine that. Possibly if some red-hot moral issue were dug up the woman's vote would be influenced by it. Possibly if either party could prove that the opposing presidential candidate beat his wife or spent his money on night club sirens women voters might react to an extent. And, undoubtedly, a war issue would make the woman's vote something to be reckoned with.

* * * *

However, it is not likely that women as a class will get wildly excited about the Constitution, States' rights, bureaucracy, Fascism, Communism, social betterment schemes or even the abstract Forgotten Man. It is not likely that they will give material support to any party, either for naming a woman on its national ticket or for having named one in the Cabinet.

* * * *

More women will vote intelligently in 1936 than ever before because, through their study classes and clubs, they have been studying national problems intensively. More will be active in the campaign and more will act independent of party tradition. But no mass movements on their part seem likely. Barring a war issue, women voters in 1936, like men, will be interested chiefly in the economic prospect—in future taxes, jobs, wages. As individuals they will turn to the parties that, in their judgment, offer the best hope of a happy tomorrow, when the family flivver can be traded in on a new car and a down payment made on an electric refrigerator.

Gain Is Noted In Upper-Class Family's Size

THE number of children in well-to-do, educated American families is gradually increasing, says Dr. Clark Wissler, curator of anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History.

This sudden reversal, which has taken place within the last year or two, is contrary to the trend in recent years of college graduates to average one-and-a-fraction children per couple, according to Dr. Wissler. He predicts that families of four or five children will soon be as common in the upper income brackets as they are among the less prosperous now. However, he predicts that the number will stop at five, and does not foresee the return of the old families of 10 and 15 children.

Dr. Wissler attributes this change to a reversal in social ideals. So much attention has been focused on the well-to-do who have few children, he said, that it has started them thinking about the matter, and a reaction the other way is setting in.

"A social ideal about the desirability of large families will inevitably bring about large families," he said. "Of course, the ideal has to be propagandized to some extent, as in Italy and Germany. Leadership and favorable legislation is bringing it about in these countries, but the mere social ideal is sufficient to bring about a reversal of trend in this country."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

There's nothing like a few swishy yards of something pretty to change the whole face of a room. In fact, that would be my first prescription for a room where a woman wants to make a big change on a small amount of money. So this reader really began with the right idea.

J. H. WRITES: We're just beginning to get our breath again after six very depressed years. We've pulled through by doing without every single extra, so you can imagine that the house is a sight; it's so rundown. We can't yet make any drastic changes, but my husband thinks a few fresh touches might help all our spirits. I figured I have enough now for new lamps . . . ours belong to the fringed period—you should see them! And if we use cretonne or chintz, I can afford new draperies and slip covers. The glass curtains are ivory. The rug is mostly green and the walls are buff. My oldest son has just given them a fresh coat of paint. What would you suggest for the curtains, slip covers and lamps?

ANSWER: I'd have the sofa in chintz with a brown ground and a flowered design, then two chairs in plain coral color with brown welting and a third chair in plain brown. Then use the flowered chintz for draperies over the ivory curtains you now have. The lamps would be lovely with coral-colored pottery bases and ivory parchment shades. Or they could have green pottery bases.

Mother Asks Advice in Helping 27-Year-Old Daughter Develop Self-Reliance.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have a daughter 27 years old and it seems she can never decide anything for herself. She must always ask the help of some one else. Are there any books she should read which might help her to develop self-reliance in solving her own problems?

* * * *

Another thing: She never sees her own mistakes, but is always commenting on the mistakes of others. Any sugestions you can give me for helping her will be gratefully received. Sincerely,

WORRIED MOTHER.

Library Can Aid.

DEAR WORRIED MOTHER: In order to outline a really constructive reading course for your daughter, one would first need to know something definite about her educational background and intellectual equipment. For that reason, I suggest you take your problem to Miss Grace Finney, director of the readers' advisory service of the Public Library (central building) at Eighth and K streets northwest. The readers' advisory service functions as guide and auxiliary to adults who seek to improve their education through independent reading.

* * * *

If you will ask for and insist upon talking personally with Miss Finney, she will give your daughter's case individual attention and prescribe the course of reading suited to her needs. She has promised me this. Miss Finney is in her office every afternoon from 1 to 4 o'clock, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1:30 until 9 p. m. Perhaps you can interest your daughter sufficiently in a program of self-improvement to persuade her to go with you to see Miss Finney. That would be by far the best procedure.

M. H.

Proper Lights Reduce Strain On the System

More Damage Results From Too Little Than Too Much.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE has long been an idea in the popular mind that there is something about light which is harmful to the eyes and that special measures are necessary to protect them. It is indeed true that light reflected into the eye in such a way as to produce what we call glare may cause unpleasant symptoms. There is a great difference, however, between light properly employed and glare. More discomfort and damage result from too little light than from too much.

Glare is caused by the reflection of light from shiny surfaces or from unprotected sources. This means that we must avoid reflected light from glossy areas and protect with shades all forms of artificial light. Reflection of the sun from water is a common cause of glare and sometimes can be avoided only by the use of tinted glasses.

How Light Is Measured.

With all our precautions we must make certain that adequate light is furnished for the type of work the eyes are called upon to perform. An accurate measurement of the amount of light at any given point may be made through the use of a small instrument known as a photometer. The unit of illumination is known as the foot-candle. This means the amount of light that a standard candle will give at a distance of one foot. It is generally considered that proper illumination for ordinary school work should provide 20 foot-candles of light in every part of the room. More light than this does no harm to the eyes if the precautions against glare are observed. Persons with defective sight require much more light than this, as do persons doing close work or handling small objects.

It is difficult for us to realize the huge amount of light that is afforded by the sun as compared with any form of artificial light in common use. Sunshine on a bright day yields 10,000 foot-candles and this is not uncomfortable if glare is avoided.

A recent survey by Fordham, of West Virginia, showed that schoolrooms in his district were unusually deficient in the amount of light supplied. One of the worst examples was that of a school in which desks at some distance from a window received only one-tenth of a foot-candle of light, or 1-200th of the amount which is considered the standard requirement; many desks had only 1-20th of the necessary amount. A number of schools depended entirely upon daylight and were unable to supplement this with artificial light on dark days. One can well imagine the effect upon pupils working in such an environment.

New Blouses for Autumn Are Distinguished By Boyish Lines And Array of Gay Colors

High Necklines and Military Effects Are Popular; Wine Red and Dull Green Are Combined in an Interesting Manner.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Bright as swirling autumn leaves—these new blouses designed to wear with fall and winter suits. Buttons, pockets and snug necklines highlight them—and give them and the suits they adorn an alert and energetic air!

Tweedy mixture and bold checks—new and exhilarating—are right as rain with sportsy suits. Note the one sketched at the bottom of the illustration. Doesn't it give a festive air to the whole outfit? Trimly tailored and short sleeved, it boasts two patch pockets (pockets are important this season . . . they're expressive of the young, boyish feeling of many of the clothes).

The high neckline still keeps its popularity this fall. Sometimes it goes even further, and adopts a military stand-up effect, as in the blouse sketched at the upper right. With its tidy little bow, and trim row of buttons up the center front, here's a blouse simple enough to wear with a sports suit . . . yet smart enough for a dashing town tailleur!

Autumn Tints Prevail.

A stimulating array of colors for fall blouses. Renaissance colors . . . Hindu colors . . . colors that borrow the bright orange and rust and gold of autumn leaves. There are shades of wine and purple that might have been worn by the beauties of Lorenzo's court—greens and blues vital as those of a Botticelli robe. Hindu rust has gone definitely fall 1935, too—and Hindu and Persian mauve pink.

Exciting, all of them. And so are the ways they combine! For instance, a wine red blouse might team up with a wine red handbag, to contrast with a dull green scarf and gloves—and a brown tweed suit. Endless combinations!

Many sweater blouses going the fashionable rounds, too, these days. With boyish lines—high necklines—and a casual assurance! Which fashion points can all be found in the sweater blouse sketched above. Why not knit it for yourself? The colors are scrumptious . . . it's made of softest knit-cro-sheen and washes like a dream!

Marriage Aided Career, Gladys Swarthout Says

GLADYS SWARTHOUT.

Husband of Opera Singer, Now in Movies, Serves as Critic; Love, Honesty and Tact Is Her Formula for Happiness.

Rare indeed is the actor-husband who stays married to one woman throughout his career, say the loose-lipped Lizzies of Hollywood. Rarer still is the actress-wife whose romantic interest is centered in only one man. But is it possible for marriage to help rather than hinder a screen career? This is the fourth of a series of articles on luminaries in Filmland.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
Post Staff Correspondent.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 20.—Perhaps few women in Hollywood are less worried about the age-old conflict between marriage and a career than dark-eyed Gladys Swarthout, lovely Metropolitan mezzo-soprano, who recently completed a film at Paramount.

"Marriage can make a great artist even greater—provided she has the courage of her convictions and is really in love with her husband," she told me on the "Rose of the Rancho" set, as she waited for technicians to adjust lights for the next scene.

As she elaborated her ideas on this subject, her husband, Frank Chapman, musical adviser for the film and Mario Garring, the director, were in conference a few feet away from us. In the chair next to Miss Swarthout sat John Boles, leading man in the picture, talking with a script girl.

But for the time, motion pictures, featured players and extras were forgotten. The brown-eyed beauty, whom Hollywood has taken to its heart, was discussing marriage—and a career.

Husband Comes First.

"If I had to choose between my husband and my work, there's no question which I would take. My husband, of course. But," she added, her eyes shining, "it's mighty nice not to have to choose. In other words, I've no intention of giving up either, any time soon."

She is convinced marriage is the flowering, the fulfillment of a woman's life and believes it can help a career in many ways. "Before I was married, there was no pattern to my social or private life," she explained. "I suffered from the driving turbulence that upsets most women whose lives are not centered around any particular person, or pivot. Marriage has changed all that. I have a double job now—to continue my career and to keep my husband happy, my home the kind of a place we may both enjoy. But I also have double returns. And I expect to be 'Mrs. Chapman' when my career is history."

She further believes a husband can be a balance wheel and a guide in a woman's career. Her husband is both, she said.

"And, above all, he is a good critic," she continued. "He advises me on everything from my singing to the way my nails are polished. He does it tactfully, of course, so I'm actually helped, not just irritated. And he compliments me when he thinks I deserve it, which makes me pleased with myself because I feel I've pleased my most critical friend as well as most sincere admirer."

How Their Romance Started.

As she told how she came to meet and marry Frank Chapman, son of the dean of the American Museum of Natural History, it was evident she is convinced her husband is certainly "the right kind."

She met in Florence one summer while she was visiting her sister. At that time he was the only American member of the Italian Opera Company. Back in New York later, she became better acquainted with him. The following year they sang in a joint recital; the next year, 1932, they were standing before a preacher in Tenafly, N. J. "Which was a good thing for me, as well as my career," she said, "because he's the best critic I've ever had."

Thus far, Miss Swarthout's progress has been one of acceptance rather than of her own seeking. "I've never been really ambitious," she said. "I'm glad, because I don't like ambitious people who ride roughshod over every one, toward a certain goal. I've never really had a goal. My one concern has been to conquer the job at hand creditably, to make the most of whatever talent I may have. I've never considered what tomorrow might have in store for me."

Yet this Deepwater, Mo., girl who first began as a choir singer in Kansas City has gone from singing in film theaters to appearing in films herself, and has also won success in opera, radio and concert work.

She attributes her success to two things—her compulsion to sing ("I simply ean't express myself any other way as well") and her determination to master any new job that comes her way. The latter is responsible for her signing a motion picture contract. "I saw the films as a new world, offering a challenge that had to be met," she said.

She laughingly confessed that when she went to Hollywood she expected it to be "the maddest thing imaginable. But I've since discovered it's a most pleasant place to live and work," she said. "I've been particularly impressed with the camaraderie out here, the friendliness of everyone. I like working in pictures. It's lots of fun."

More interesting than opera?

What about radio? Would she ever go back?

"I don't know," she said. "My plans about that are rather indefinite as yet. Right now I'm more concerned with pictures and the usual 14 weeks' season at the Metropolitan."

Profitable Use Of Leisure Sets Child Example

Pursuits of Parents Are Factor in Education of Youngsters.

The following article is one of a series on home activities for children appearing Tuesdays and Saturdays on the woman's page. Mrs. Bartlett, the author, is active in progressive education circles.

By Lenore K. Bartlett.

EXAMPLE is a strong force in the lives of children. They are constantly imitating. That being the case, our responsibility toward our children should start with ourselves. The way in which parents use their leisure is a determining factor in their children's education.

Mrs. Bartlett.

What do we adults do with our own leisure. We are apt to say to ourselves that it is too late to start anything when age is no legitimate barrier to learning. Why not start those piano lessons which have long been anticipated? Or learn a language? Or how about an art class? Or a course in economics or history? Health education, astronomy, hand crafts, swimming, dramatics, pottery making are all possibilities.

What you decide upon isn't as important as it is to start something. One thing leads to another, and who can tell what a little constructive action will lead to? Set some sort of a routine for yourself and stick to it. Include in that routine some goal which you can work toward so that the winter will really count for something.

Suggestions for Leisure.

I called on a friend of mine the other day and found that she had been "dabbling in clay." She started modeling a friend's head from memory and worked at it until she had evolved a splendid likeness. I particularly liked the figure of Tarzan and a Grecian head. This friend had had no training in this line, but a genuine interest led her on and she taught herself.

Another friend has started piano lessons, which have brought her great emotional release during a period of intense strain. It also reminded her husband of his old violin; he is now practicing and playing simple duets with his wife. One woman I knew found herself at loose ends due to domestic trouble. She had done some art work as a young girl, but had given it up. One day someone suggested that she try drawing as a means of helping herself. The usual objections, such as not having real talent and feeling incapable, were expressed, but the idea stuck with her and the last I heard of her she was drawing sketches of children's clothes for a newspaper.

Many Courses Available.

A beautiful set of chessmen was carved by a man during a period of unemployment. Constant search for rare coins is the diversion of another. A gorgeous doll house took many months of effort on the part of a father and daughter. A rock garden, a terrarium, a miniature Japanese garden will meet the interests of some.

Washington is fortunate in having many splendid courses in general education. The Y. W. C. A. has courses which are open to men, women and children. If you will phone or write for their fall folder I am sure that you will find something which will interest you. Roosevelt High School also offers many evening classes for adults.

For help in providing your children a more interesting home life or in meeting other of their problems, write Mrs. Bartlett in care of The Post.

Mother Frequently to Blame If Her Daughter Manifests Little or No Interest in Cooking

Case of District Girl, 13, Shows What Encouragement Will Do

Josephine Stafford Submits Menu in The Post's Economy Contest; Parent Permitted Her to Try School Recipes at Home.

By Dorothea Duncan.

The woman who complains that her daughter is not interested in household tasks is often to blame for the child's disinterest. Many women neglect to make cooking, sewing and other activities interesting and often when a child does show an inclination to try her hand at some simple task about the house, she is not encouraged, because her mother can do it in less time and with greater efficiency. Sometimes it takes but one snub on the part of the mother to kill the ambition of a youngster.

Last week one of the most interesting contributions to The Post's recipe contest for economical and well-balanced dinner menus was submitted by a 13-year-old Washington schoolgirl, Josephine Stafford, of 2439 Newton street northeast. Josephine explained that her first interest in cooking began with a course at Taft Junior High School last year. Her mother, Mrs. Reuben Stafford, took great delight in Josephine's interest in the subject and permitted her to try her hand in the kitchen at home, remaking the recipes that she had learned in school. In just a year, Josephine has learned enough about cooking and planning a meal to be of valuable help to her mother. The pleasure that she derived from her course in cooking at school was followed up by the encouragement that she received at home, and now she is anticipating with keen delight the possibility of an advanced course in cooking at McKinley High School where she is enrolled as a sophomore.

Breaking a child into the routine of a household task is naturally more difficult at first for the mother than in doing the work quickly and capably by herself. It takes time and patience, but in the end some of the burden of household routine can be lifted from the mother's shoulders by the daughter.

Most girls when they are mere youngsters are interested in the fancy side of cookery. Cakes and fudge, desserts and cookies, are dishes that intrigue them. If your daughter expresses a desire to learn to prepare the fancy foods first, teach her how. She may want to learn the fundamentals of baking first. After she does learn to make a delicious cake or a pound of creamy fudge, she can do these little tasks in your place when someone in the church or Parent and Teachers Association asks for a donation for the bazaar or lawn fete.

Salad Provides Balance in Meal

Baked Beans and Ginger-Bread Are Main Items on Same Menu.

Those old standbys, baked beans and gingerbread, are the base of the economy dinner which won a prize in this week's contest for Mrs. Anne Mundy, of 1504 V street southeast. As they are fairly substantial, she balances the menu with chopped cabbage, diced potatoes, green pepper and onion served in a salad served with French dressing. Her complete menu follows:

Old-Fashioned Dinner.

Baked Beans
Garden Salad French Dressing
Rye Bread Coffee
Gingerbread Applebutter

Baked Beans.

Two pounds of navy beans (soaked overnight), one-quarter pound bacon or the butt end of a ham, one-half cup brown sugar, one-half cup dark molasses, salt and pepper to taste, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one-quarter teaspoon cloves and one can of condensed tomato soup.

Soak beans over night and drain. Cover again with cold water and put on to boil. When hot add a pinch of soda. Boil three to five minutes; drain and cover this time with hot water. Boil about three-quarters of an hour. Add meat, sugar, molasses and seasonings and bake until almost done, keeping the beans covered with enough hot water to prevent those on top from becoming dry and hard. About an hour before serving add the soup (home-made chili sauce may be preferred) and mix well with the beans. If you have used a ham butt, cut the meat away from the bone and remove it from the beans. Then put the beans in individual bean pots with a portion of meat for each and bake until there is very little liquid—just enough to bind together.

Gingerbread.

½ cup sugar
½ cup shortening (lard and butter mixed)
1 egg
1 cup New Orleans molasses
2½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons soda
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup hot water.

Cream shortening and sugar. Add beaten egg, molasses, then dry ingredients which have been sifted together. Add hot water last and beat until smooth. The batter is soft, but it makes a fine cake. Bake 25 to 35 minutes at 325 degrees Fahrenheit to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Bake in muffin tins. When done cut a cone-shaped piece from the top and fill the cavity with applebutter. Lightly replace the pieces cut from top and dust whole with powdered sugar.

For the salad, blend chopped cabbage, diced tomatoes, onion and green pepper, both chopped fine. Serve with French dressing.

PEPPER RELISH.

1 peck red peppers
2 cups cold water
1 cup salt.
2 cups vinegar
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup white mustard seed

Wipe peppers, cut in halves, remove seeds, and put through meat chopper. Put in kettle and add water and salt; cover and let stand over night. Drain and pour over vinegar, sugar and mustard seed which have been brought to boiling point and boiled two minutes. Fill jars to overflow and adjust covers.

Wanted—Recipes For 2 Favorites Seldom Published

A thorough search by this department for two recipes requested by our readers has met with no success. One is for a jam prepared from the berries of the wild rose bush, and the other for a succotash popular in Georgia that combines squirrel, chicken, veal, corn and beans.

These old favorites seldom find their way into cook books, but can frequently be found tucked away in an old family scrap book.

We are asking the co-operation of the readers of The Post food page in locating these recipes. If you have either recipe, please send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post.

If Hot Breads Fail, Here's the Remedy

Different Kinds Require Special Oven Heat.

If your attempts at making quick breads are unsuccessful, perhaps your failure is not due to the ingredients of the batter nor the way in which you mix it but to the oven temperature at which the breads are baked. This is an important feature in the success of each class of quick breads.

Biscuit doughs should be baked for 12 to 15 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees F.). Corn bread will take 40 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees F.). Fruit bread requires 1 hour in a slow to moderate (325 degrees F.) oven. Nut bread requires 1¼ hours at the same temperature. Muffins should be baked in a moderately hot to hot oven (400 degrees F. to 450 degrees F.) for from 25 to 30 minutes. Popovers should be baked for 20 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees F.), after which the oven should be lowered to moderate (350 degrees F.) and the baking continued for 15 to 20 minutes.

These are the standard tested times and temperatures for each class of quick breads. Unusual variations of any one class of quick breads may require a little slower or quicker oven and more or less time, depending upon the change of oven temperature.

If you have no oven thermometer you can make a practical oven test to obtain desired temperature. A slow oven is from 250 to 350 degrees F., a moderate oven from 350 to 400 degrees F., a hot oven from 400 to 450 degrees F. and a very hot oven 450 to 500 degrees F.

Set a pan sprinkled with flour in the oven and if it becomes a delicate brown in five minutes the oven is slow. If the flour turns a medium golden brown in five minutes, the oven is moderate, if the flour turns a deep, dark brown in five minutes, the oven is hot, and if it turns a deep, dark brown in three minutes, the oven is very hot. The same tests may also be done with white tissue paper or white unglazed paper.

Party Sandwiches.

If you are making decorative sandwiches for a party cut the bread lengthwise instead of in the usual way. This permits a longer piece with less crust and not so much bread will be wasted.

Josephine Stafford, of 2439 Newton street northeast, tells Dorothea Duncan that cooking classes are fun, especially because her mother permits her to retry the recipes learned in school in her kitchen at home.

Ham, Rice, Shrimps, Tomatoes Form Basis of Tempting Dish

Spanish Pilau, Suggested as the Main Course in Another Menu, Is Prepared With Ground Beef or Leftover Fowl.

A mixture of ham, rice, shrimps and tomatoes form the basis for the main dish of this economical menu submitted by Miss Paula Gruber, 1121 Twenty-fourth street northwest, and awarded a prize in The Post's recipe contest for inexpensive and attractive dinner menus.

ECONOMICAL MENU.

Jambalaya
Celery Relish Radishes
French Bread Fruit Crusty
Coffee

Jambalaya.

1 cup rice
1 tablespoon lard
1½ cups tomatoes
1 onion
Thyme
1 slice ham (¾ to 1 pound)
1 cup shrimps
1 bud garlic
1 green pepper
Parsley, salt and pepper, Worcestershire, red pepper
4 cups water
1 tablespoon flour

Blend the lard and flour. Add the chopped ham, shrimp, tomatoes and cook a few minutes. Add the onion and other herbs and seasoning and four cups of water. Let simmer for about 10 minutes. Add rice and boil until the rice is done. (About 20 minutes). Care should be taken not to stir the mixture or the rice will be gummy. However it is necessary to lift the mixture with a fork from the bottom of the pot occasionally to keep the rice from burning. Keep the vessel covered while cooking.

Yield: 6 servings ¾ cup
Temperature: Boiling
Time: 45 minutes

Fruit Crusty.

Half fill small loaf pan with diced apples, peaches or whatever fruit is most convenient or desirable. Dot with butter and sprinkle with butter and cinnamon. Mix the following ingredients:

1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 egg

Crumble and sprinkle over fruit. If more flavor is desired, dot with more butter and sprinkle nutmeg or cinnamon over the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven exactly 35 minutes. This may be served warm or cold, plain or with cream.

A combination of tomatoes and ground beef or leftover fowl or cooked meat makes the main dish of this inexpensive menu for which The Post awarded Mrs. C. W. Burlin, 4306 Arkansas avenue, a prize in its recent recipe contest for economical and well-balanced dinner menus.

SPANISH DINNER.

Spanish Pilau Bran Muffins
Shredded Lettuce
Deep Dish Fruit Pie Top Milk
Coffee or Tea

Spanish Pilau.

2 cups freshly ground beef
1 egg
1 tablespoon shortening
Onion, if desired
2 cups strained tomatoes or tomato juice
Cooked rice (about 2 cups)

Melt shortening in heavy skillet or Dutch oven, cook onion slightly, then remove onion. Beat egg and add to seasoned meat. Make into small balls and brown on all sides in pan the onion was cooked in, pour tomatoes over meat balls and cover pan with tight lid. Allow to simmer over slow fire about 20 minutes, then add enough cooked rice to thicken mixture. Cover and simmer until ready to serve.

This is delicious and allows a great deal of elasticity, as left-over roast beef or chicken may be used in place of fresh beef. Any left-overs of this dish may be placed in refrigerator and served at a later meal.

Deep-Dish Fruit Pie.

Fruit and sugar to sweeten
1 cup cracker crumbs (soda crackers, graham crackers or wafers)
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ cup butter

Fill a greased pudding pan three-fourths full of fresh sliced apples or peaches—or one-half full of cooked fruit. A mixture of dried fruits is good. Add sugar to sweeten to desired taste. Melt butter in a saucepan, add sugar to crumbs, then stir into the butter until crumbs are all buttered. Spread over fruit, cover and bake in a moderate oven until fruit is cooked. If cooked fruit is used, leave lid on until mixture is well heated, then remove lid and allow crumbs to brown. In using fresh fruit bake covered about 40 minutes, then remove lid and brown.

Time for Broccoli.

Italian broccoli is back in the market. An average bunch of broccoli, weighing from 1½ to 2½ pounds, will serve three to six persons.

The Cook's Dictionary

CHERVIL—Flavor like parsley, but milder. Young leaves may be used in meat and vegetable soups, salads and as a garnish. More attractive than parsley as a garnish, but not as lasting. Used in a powdered combination called Fines Herbes.

SAFFRON—May be used to give pale yellow color to bread, cakes and sauces, or to color confectionery. Has a pleasant flavor and good color.

ANISE—Leaves are used for garnishing and for flavor. Oil is extracted from the seed and used as anise extract.

CROUTONS—Small cubes of fried or toasted bread served with soup.

PIECE DE RESISTANCE—The main dish in a meal; the roast.

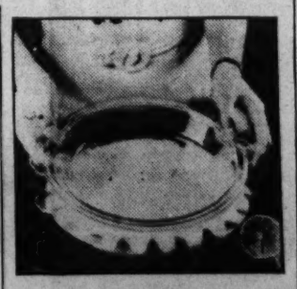
It Is Solved by Using Two Glass Heat-Resisting Plates.

The main problem in preparing a filled pie is not in making the filling, but in turning out a crust that does not hump in the center during the baking.

Two glass heating resisting pie plates of the same size will solve the problem of the distorted crust. First, place the rolled pie crust inside of one of the pie plates. Press the dough lightly to fit the pie plate, trim and flute the edges. Then set the second pie plate into the pastry-lined plate and bake. The weight of the top pie plate keeps the crust in place. After baking and removing the top pie plate, a shapely shell is ready to receive its filling.

Grandmother also had her own method of accomplishing a shapely pie crust. She filled the lined pie plate with a sheet of waxed paper on top of which she placed a layer of uncooked, dried navy beans. The weight of the beans will keep the pie crust from humping, but it is a less convenient method than the one given above.



Make a shapely pie shell this way.

Vegetables Featured On Economical Dinner

Ethel M. Merritt, 225 Emerson street northwest, wins $1 in the economy dinner contest just concluded. Her suggestions for a meal which features vegetables, in these days when meats are high, follow:

Tomato Juice
Stuffed Onions
Mashed Potatoes Corn on Cob
Celery
Cherry Whip

Stuffed Onions.

6 large white onions
2 T. B. melted fat
2 T. B. tomato catsup
¼ cup fine bread crumbs

Parboil onions 15 minutes and drain. Mix meat, salt, pepper, fat and catsup. Remove centers from onions and fill with the meat mixture. Arrange in a baking dish, cover and bake in a moderate oven (350°) about one hour. Remove cover, sprinkle tops with crumbs, dot with small bits of butter and bake until crumbs are brown.

Cherry Whip.

1 pint boiling water

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Chill. When slightly thickened beat with rotary egg beater until fluffily beaten like whipped cream. Pile in sherbet glasses. Top with a maraschino cherry if desired. Serves six.

"Reconstituted" Milk Is Good Substitute

Milk powder when it is "reconstituted"—that is, mixed with water to bring it back to the original composition of the milk—is a satisfactory substitute for fresh milk. It may be used with excellent results in making such dishes as cream soups, sauces, scalloped dishes, breads, cocoa, custards, puddings and ice creams. Both skim milk and whole milk powders may be secured. Even as a beverage it is palatable and its nutritive value seems to compare favorably with that of fresh milk.

Save the Vinegar.

The vinegar from the pickle bottle need not be wasted. Save it to pour over cucumbers, or for other foods which require vinegar and seasoning.

Grilled Dinner Easily Prepared And Economical

A grilled dinner can be interesting, economical and easily prepared as shown by the following menu and recipes that won for Mrs. Mary Ellen Hallett, 1814 G street northwest, a prize in The Post's inexpensive menu contest last week.

A GRILLED DINNER.

Noisettes of Lamb en Brochette
Potato Cheese Dreams
Broiled Tomatoes Green Peas
Hot Biscuits
Maple Nut Float Coffee

Noisettes of Lamb.

Cut shoulder of lamb (or any other fleshy part) into small squares. Season with salt, pepper, and paprika, and string on skewers. Dip in melted butter, place on rack of broiler pan. Broil about 5 minutes, turn and broil 5 minutes more or until well browned. Pan should be as close to broiler unit as possible without touching.

Tomatoes not too ripe may be broiled along with these lamb tidbits.

Cheese dreams are a delicious vegetable accompaniment and also inexpensive. Slice cold boiled potatoes in large piecese about ¼ inch thick. Make into "sandwiches" using a slice of American cheese and a bit of prepared mustard between the slices. Brush with butter. Broil with the lamb.

Maple Nut Float.

Brown together as for white sauce:

1 cup brown sugar
2 to 4 tablespoons butter
7 tablespoons flour

2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt

Cook in a double boiler until thick. Add slowly 2 egg yolks and cook two minutes. When removing from stove add 1 teaspoon maple extract and fold in the well-beaten whites of the two eggs. When cold, stir in ½ cup or more chopped walnuts.

Proper Utensils Mean Better Food

Deep Kettle and Wire Basket Are Needed for Deep Fat Frying.

Using well adapted utensils for cooking certain types of foods is an important factor in the success of the dish. For example, special equipment is necessary for deep-fat frying.

A special kettle of heavy iron is the first requisite. The kettle with a bowl shape has one advantage over the flat bottomed kettle; the sediment from the food sings into the curve of the bowl and does not adhere to the newly fried food.

A wire basket will aid in lifting the food in and out of the hot fat. A skimmer may be used but is not so convenient to handle. Some of these baskets are made so that they can be adjusted firmly to the kettle when lowered into the fat as well as when lifted out. Otherwise, a long-handled spoon or fork is necessary to hold the basket out of the fat while the food is draining.

A large flat pan with a rim can be used to hold the basket while it is being emptied or filled. A large pan lined with soft paper is required on which to drain the food that has been fried. The drained food can then be transferred to a warm platter and kept in a warming oven until the remaining croquettes, etc., are fried.

A deep fat thermometer is of great advantage in judging the temperature of the fat and keeping it at a constant temperature. The old fashioned bread test can be used, however, if you have no thermometer.

Prunes Are Versatile.

Leftover prunes can be served in salads, in quick breads, both muffins and loaf bread, for prune whip, in custards and tapiocas and in combination with apricots for a delectable upside-down cake.

About Lemon Juice.

One medium or average sized lemon will yield three tablespoons of juice and three teaspoons of grated rind. The price of lemons has dropped with the temperature and they are a good buy now.

Social Plans Of U.S. Topic For Conclave

Fredericksburg Chosen for Annual Parley Opening Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20.—The New Deal's agencies for providing employment and its plans for old-age pensions will undergo searching review at the thirteenth convention of the League of Virginia Municipalities Wednesday and Thursday.

The conclave, which annually provides an open forum for discussion by city and town officials, will be held after conventions of the Virginia Police Executives Association and the Building Officials Conference of Virginia. The police will meet Monday and Tuesday and the building inspectors Tuesday.

Several hundred municipal executives will attend the three meetings, according to Morton Wallerstein, executive secretary of the league, which acts as a secretariat for the police and building inspector groups.

To Outline Works Program.

The present status of the works program in Virginia will be outlined at the opening session of the league by John Galleher, Virginia NEC director; PWA Director James Anderson, and WPA Director William A. Smith.

Ramifications of the program, whose changes have puzzled municipal officers, probably will be discussed in detail at an open forum following addresses by Galleher and co-workers. This discussion will be led by Town Manager L. B. Dutrow, of Front Royal; Councilman Thomas B. Jones, of Newport News, and Public Works Director Gamble Bowers, of Richmond.

Other subjects to be discussed will be old-age pensions, tax limitations laws, municipal finance and plans for pollution control.

Wednesday afternoon State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrisett will lead discussion after an address on "the fallacy of tax limitation control" by Clifford Ham, field consultant of the American Municipal Association. Richard Messer, director of the State Bureau of Sanitary Engineering, will outline plans of tidewater cities for meeting the pollution threat in rivers and bays.

Civil Service Chief to Speak.

The chief speaker at the banquet in the Hotel Stratford that night will be Dr. Leonard D. White, chairman of the United States Civil Service Commission, whose subject will be "The New Aspect of Public Service." R. Stuart Royer, former city manager of Fredericksburg and former league president, will recall stories of the league meeting here two decades ago.

At 8 a. m. Thursday the mayors, councilmen and managers of cities will hear William R. Shands, director of the State Legislative Reference Bureau, on old-age pensions.

Town officials will hear former State Auditor Coleman Andrews explain a plan for auditing financial affairs of a town.

At the same hour public works engineers will be told by Russell Black, planning consultant for Virginia, how to correlate State and local Public Works plans. At another breakfast assembly Dr. Clarence E. Ridley will speak to auditors and clerks of cities and towns.

League President E. M. Stull, of Covington, will preside over the general sessions. Mayor R. J. Payne, of Fredericksburg, will welcome the delegates and Thomas W. White, of Newport News, will reply.

Body of Youth Is Recovered At Shore Resort

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 20.—The body of L. Carranza Sanchez, 21, recovered from South River off Selby-on-the-Bay today, has been released by coroner and will be sent to his home at Sante Fe. N. Mex.

Sanchez drowned last night when he jumped from a rowboat in 7 feet of water, about 25 feet out from shore. The body was recovered by watermen with grapples.

The youth was one of a party of four who came to the resort and went to the beach. Others in the party, according to Deputy Sheriff Arthur Fendlay, of Mayo, were Miss Catherine Miles, 3907 Joselyn srteet northwest, and Miss Eula Hernkhuerman, 1824 Belmont street, both of Washington.

Residents at Selby-on-the-Bay said soon after the party went to the beach, Sanchez was one of a group that put out in a rowboat, without oars, drifting along close to the shore. The youth, who could not swim, had removed his shoes and stockings and rolled up his trousers.

As the boat started drifting out from the shore, residents said Sanchez jumped over the side, apparently thinking the water was shallow. When the body was found the feet were stuck in the mud.

Dennis Chavez, jr., son of Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, and a friend of Sanchez, arranged with Sheriff Joseph W. Alton and Magistrate Edward Collinson, of Mayo, acting coroner, for the release of the body.

Sanchez, who was employed by the NRA in Washington, and attended night school at George Washington University, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Blas Sanchez, of Sante Fe. The father is a prominent stock dealer.

Davis Backs Local Relief Idea of Coad

Caroline Senator First of G.O.P. to Indorse Decentralized Aid.

He Favors Both Town, County Care of Unemployables.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 20.—Expressing the first Republican approval of the plan to have responsibility for care of unemployables left to the political subdivisions of the State, State Senator Wilmer F. Davis, of Caroline County, said today that he was heartily in favor of the idea.

The possibility of decentralizing the relief burden was suggested last week by Senator J. Allan Coad, Democrat, of St. Marys, majority floor leader and chairman of the senate finance committee.

Senator Davis agreed with Senator Coad's argument that the end of State care for jobless would save the cost of the special session scheduled for February.

Would Abolish Sales Tax.

"I am heartily in favor of the whole idea," Senator Davis said. "I'd like to see all sales taxes discontinued—gross receipts of retail sales taxes or anything like that. And if the counties had to take care of their own, they'd be more careful about how many people got on the relief lists."

Senator Davis was in Baltimore to confer with State roads and Federal relief officials in regard to repairs of damage done in the Federalsburg vicinity by the storm last week. He said he had been successful in his conferences.

Davis said he thought most counties would favor caring for their own needy. Objections, he said, would come from those areas where the relief load was heaviest. However, in his opinion the advantages of stricter supervision of relief clients and the saving of the cost of a special session would outweigh the difficulties of other counties.

Favors Town Responsibility.

Davis said that he would even favor making towns responsible for their unemployables, leaving to the counties those in rural areas.

The arrangement suggested by Coad has been broached before, but met with opposition from Baltimore City. More than half the State relief funds are spent in Baltimore.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., Sept. 20.—Sentences ranging from four months to five years imprisonment were meted out today by Judge David A. Robb in the closing stages of the September term of Garrett County circuit court.

The longest sentences were imposed for forgery. Other offenses included manslaughter, assault with intent to kill, attempted extortion and illegal manufacturing of liquor.

George and Lewis Fazenbaker, convicted of forgery, drew five years each in the penitentiary. Viola Hare, convicted of the same charge, was sentenced to four. A suspended sentence of three years was given Louise Baker in the same case.

The last three pleaded guilty to forgery and passing forged checks. George Fazenbaker stood trial and was convicted. The Fazenbakers and Viola Hare are former offenders.

Meeting Is Silent on Negro's Suit for Admission.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 20.—The board of regents of the University of Maryland, meeting here today, named a committee of five to consider selection of a president of the institution, but did not act on a Negro's application for admission to law school.

It was the board's first meeting since Dr. Raymond A. Pearson resigned as president of the university at the regents' request. H. C. Byrd, former vice president, has been acting president.

None of the names mentioned in connection with the presidency were placed before the board today. Byrd, it is understood, is favored by a majority of the regents for the position.

Board Silent on Negro.

No announcement was forthcoming from the board as to what consideration would be given to the application of Donald G. Murray, colored, for enrollment in the university's law school. If admitted, and a circuit judge has ruled that he should be, he will be the first Negro to attend the university.

Representative William P. Cole, of Towson, was named chairman of the committee to consider a successor to Dr. Pearson. Others chosen were Gen. Clinton L. Riggs, of Baltimore; J. Milton Patterson, of Cumberland; John E. Raine, of Baltimore, and Mrs. John D. Whitehurst, of Baltimore.

Mrs. Whitehurst, the board's secretary, said a date for a meeting of the special committee had not been set. She said the committee would consider persons proposed for the presidency and report back to the regents.

Byrd Attends Session.

The board began its meeting in the Fidelity Building here shortly after 10:30 a. m. and was in session several hours. Judge Calvin Chesnut, named a member of the board this week, was present. Byrd also attended the meeting.

A writ of mandamus against the university has been granted the Negro student, Murray, by Judge Eugene O'Dunne in circuit court here. The judge ordered that Murray be admitted to the law school despite any appeal the university might make.

An appeal has been drafted for presentation to the Court of Appeals at its October term.

Oakland, Md., Sept. 20 (AP).—The Garrett County commissioners have been assured by the State Roads Commission that a $54,000 road building program will be started in the county in the near future.

The program calls for work on the Loch Lynn-Gorman road, costing $27,000, and for an extension from Swanton to Beckman at the same cost.

Historic Homes Owned by St. John's Are Show Places of City.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 20.—An announcement that St. John's College would sell two of its historic buildings, the Hammond-Harwood and Brice houses, brought protests from citizens here today who feared the Hammond-Harwood house, one of the Nation's colonial show places, would be turned into a private residence.

The Hammond-Harwood house was built prior to the Revolutionary War and has been adjudged the most perfect type of Georgian architecture in the United States. It was built by Mathias Hammond and bought by St. John's at an auction when Maj. Enoch B. Carey was president of the institution.

It was restored to its original condition with colonial pieces from the collection of R. T. Haines Halsey. The museum was used by the college history department, but when Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock became college president the colonial furnishings were removed.

President Woodcock in announcing the sale, said "it is of no practical use to the college now and we will concentrate all our collegiate activity on the campus, where we have ample grounds and facilities." He said financial returns from the building were not enough to pay the custodian. The Brice house was built in 1765.

Although the Brice house has paid returns, it also was offered for sale. Col. Woodcock hopes to get a total of $175,000 for both buildings.

Court Asked To Void Stay In Power Case

U. S. Restraint Against Company's New River Project Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 20.—Contending that the New River is not a navigable stream and therefore is under the control of the State and not the Federal Government, Attorneys-General A. P. Staples of Virginia and Homer A. Holt of West Virginia today asked that the Government injunction to restrain the Appalachian Power Co. from building a hydroelectric plant on the New River at Bradford be dismissed in a hearing before Judge John Paul in United States District Court.

Both insisted that erection of the dam would not interfere with navigation on the Great Kanawha River, 155 miles below the site of the plant. They asserted that the delegation of power to the Federal Power Commission is unconstitutional and that the Federal Government is usurping the powers reserved for the States when it enforces the water power act of 1920 in this case.

Raymond T. Jackson, of Cleveland, counsel for the power company, concluded his argument by saying the company is willing to operate under a minor Federal license, but feels that it does not need a major license because the New River is not navigable. He declared the plant is being constructed so that it will not interfere with the continuous flow of water to the Great Kanawha River and will not affect the latter stream's navigability.

He cited the reports of Army engineers that the construction of the project would not interfere with the flow of water in the Kanawha and asserted the power commission acted in "the teeth" of the evidence presented.

The attorneys general of the two States were given leave to appear in the case as friends of the court because their States are interested in the project and in water power regulation in general.

The States side with the Appalachian Co.'s contention that the New River is not a navigable stream and that the erection of the hydroelectric plant does not involve interstate commerce.

Plans for Playoff In National Made

Cubs, Cards Would Meet in Opener Sept. 30.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Plans for a play-off series for the National League title, should the Cubs and Cardinals be tied at the end of the regular schedule, were announced today by Ford Frick, president of the senior circuit. Should a three-way tie, with the New York Giants involved, result, a "round robin" series will be arranged.

In the event the Cardinals and Cubs tie, a best two-out-of-three series would be held, with the first game at Chicago September 30 and the second at St. Louis October 1. The site of a third game, if necessary, would be decided by the toss of a coin. In case of postponement, the clubs would remain on the scene of battle until the game could be played.

A play-off would make it necessary to alter the date for the opening of the world series, which has been scheduled for October 2 in the park of the American League champion.

Finds Baer Hopes To Deposit Louis In Scribes' Laps

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—It is a favorite pastime among prize fighters to try to single out gentlemen of the press who have been especially unfavorable to them in their descriptions of the preliminary training, disparaging their ability and extolling that of their paid enemies, and knock said paid enemy or opponent into the lap of the gentlemen of the press.

There was only one prize fighter, I believe, who really could do this exciting and stimulating trick, and that was Sam Langford. I never saw him fight, but they say that old Sam had the same accuracy in dropping a fighter into a reporter's lap, two and three rows back of the ring, that a traveling salesman has with a smokeroom cuspidor. It is supposed to be the supreme gesture of contempt, revenge and humiliation to drop the opposing pug into the lap of one of the writers, and the writer is supposed never to be the same thereafter.

All this is preamble to the devilish predicament in which Max Adelbert Baer will find himself next Tuesday night, if all I hear is true. Max Adelbert has some six laps in which he hopes to deposit his opponent before the evening is done—those of five journalists and Bill Brown, State Athletic Commissioner; and he has only one Joe Louis to deposit. It seems inconceivable that there should be enough of Joe Louis to go around, or that he can last long enough to visit every lap for which he is scheduled.

Baer's only hope, as far as I can see, is to manage to get his pass receivers all sitting in the same row, and then deposit Mr. Louis on same, lengthwise, and let each one be satisfied with a small piece. I offer this because I do not wish anything else preying on Baer's mind. He has enough to worry him already. Never have I seen a man in such a pre-battle stew. He is as wild as Lewis is calm and unconcerned.

ALARMING note on the fatality of things that go in series: Max Baer lost to Braddock and immediately married Mary Ellen. Fred Perry lost to Wilmer Allison and immediately married Helen Vinson. Joe Louis . . . and is going to marry Marva Trotter right after the fight. That's asking for it. He will be the third loser in the string, you mark the words of Gallico, the old hexhex doctor.

A number of people, my own colleagues included, are accusing me of trying to lug water on both shoulders by indicating that I knew all along Louis is the better man, but that I am picking Baer just to be smart and score the upset although every one can tell from my pieces that I knew Louis would would win all along. This is a great injustice, and I am deeply and terribly hurt by such allegations. Me look for an out? Why, I wouldn't think of it.

Still, it isn't a bad one is it? But, actually, the truth of the tenor of my pieces is just this: When I tell you how good Louis looks in training and how bad Baer looks at the same kind of exercise, I am reporting what I see. But when I advise you that Baer is going to win this fight, I am telling you what I think and feel. I still take the rap for a bum pick, girls.

IF this were to be a boxing for points I would not hesitate to pick Louis, but it isn't anything of the kind. It's going to be a fight, pure and simple, with the Marquis of Queensberry's rules taking an awful kicking around from time to time. I think it's going to be rough and abysmal, no quatrer asked or taken, and I think Baer is going to be the rougher and the more abysmal in the showdown. I am convinced that he has a great punch left to him and that when he applies it in rage and malice it will do the trick.

Louis apparently eats and sleeps himself into the state where he explodes like a charge of gunpowder in the ring, but

Louis Will End Hard Work Today

To Cut Loose Against Five Spar Mates; Entire Camp Confident.

By the Associated Press.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Sept. 20.—Joe Louis, who thrives on action, cheered up a bit today at the prospect of having a few sparring partners tossed at him for annihilation tomorrow.

Already honed to razor-edge for Tuesday night's battle with Max Baer in New York, the Brown Bomber is scheduled to take his last real workout. He'll get a chance at all of his five sparring partners, including Paul Cavalier, the Paterson (N. J.) heavy, who has been out of circulation for a few days because of illness.

It will be Louis' ninth ring session since he pitched camp three weeks ago. Not in many years has a top-flight boxer gone into an important bout with so few hard workouts under his belt.

Little Is Required.

The truth is Joe is ready now and has been for more than a week. He has been fighting so often in the last year very little conditioning is required. A heavy eater when out of training, it usually is necessary to take off a few pounds, but that is about all.

In his last few ring appearances Joe has been holding his punches, but since tomorrow's drill is the last, Trainer Jack Blackburn has promised to let him cut loose a bit. This was bad news for the unfortunate sparring partners, most of whom pushed back their ham and eggs untasted this morning.

All Are Confident.

Everybody bubbles over with confidence in this camp, from Louis down to the lowliest hanger-on. John Roxborough, one of the Bomber's managers, who heretofore has insisted Louis would finish Baer in the eighth round, took off three notches today and predicted the catastrophe would occur no later than the fifth.

Blackburn insists Joe will go out to stop Baer with the first punch and that's probably official since Louis says he'll start shooting whenever Blackburn says the word.

This was the dullest day the camp has known. Visitors were few and Louis, resplendent in a bright green hat, marched across the street to the camp cafe and had a glass of milk with a group of admirers.

Joe's wedding to Marva Trotter now is scheduled for anytime between the end of the fight and Wednesday noon. If he comes out of the scrap without a black eye, cut lip or other blemish, the pair will dash to the preacher's straight from the ring. Otherwise the event is booked for Wednesday morning.

Emory and Henry In Opener Tonight

Keys Leads Team Against Carson-Newman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emory, Va., Sept. 20.—Emory and Henry's football squad will flash a wide-open attack against Carson-Newman in the opening game of the season here tomorrow night.

Coach W. S. Jackson has become lateral minded, judging by the plays which have featured scrimmages this week, and his gridiron charges may resemble a basket ball team in action.

Sam Keys probably will bear the brunt of the Wasp attack against Carson-Newman. He has been running like a demon and passing effectively.

Coach Jackson has not yet made up his mind about Mark Kegley. The Pulaski ace, who was the highest scoring back in Virginia two seasons ago, has been working hard and it appears that his old leg injury has completely healed.

Carson-Newman is led by Capt. Booth, one of the ablest centers in the Appalachian section, and he will have veteran running mates in every position. The visitors may have a slightly heavier line than Emory, the average there being 181 to 178 for Emory, and the visiting back field will average 170 to a meager 156 for the Wasps.

Dowler's Indians, Confronted With Severe Schedule, Lack Reserves in Line But Loom as No Push-Over in Big Games.

(The sixth of a series of articles concerning the possibilities of football teams in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.)

By Paul W. Ferris,

Post Sports Editor.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Sept. 20. William and Mary's football team will go places this fall—Annapolis, West Point and Dartmouth, for instance—but whether or not it does things depends upon Coach Tommy Dowler's success in welding a cohesive unit from among the fiery sophomores and seasoned veterans at his disposal.

Both the Army and Navy, among other well-organized forces, will be called upon to put down the Indian uprising, and, without more capable reserves from tackle to tackle, there is small hope of an all-victorious campaign. The Williamsburg restoration, however, has extended sufficiently to Tricolor gridiron fortunes—even though without benefit of Rockefeller financing—to form a basis for expectation of at least two or three notable triumphs this autumn.

There'll be much ado about something here tomorrow afternoon when the Tricolor meets its first test against a dangerous University of Virginia eleven that provides the crucible for the Dowlerites at the dedication of William and Mary's fine new stadium.

More Severe Tests Follow.

And the Cavaliers are followed in uninterrupted succession by Navy, Army and Virginia Tech, all to be faced on alien soil. Guilford and Roanoke then provide slightly less strenuous competition, but a resumption of more major hostilities finds the Tribesmen combating V. M. I., Dartmouth, Emory and Henry and Richmond in another set of battles offering no opportunity for relaxation.

With no thought of invoking sanctions against such unfair schedule-making practices, Coach Dowler will build his double-wingback Colgate-type onslaught around a varsity to be picked from 13 veterans and 10 sophomores, to list only the most promising of the present squad of 35 candidates, and not counting three present casualties who will be again available for heavy duty before some of the climax games are reached.

The back-field forays will be led by Capt. "Stumpy" Bryant, who punts as well as a Halligan and carries the ball with the elusiveness of a Maxey or Palese. V. P. I. and Richmond are still lamenting their carelessness in turning down chances to acquire the stocky Newport News speedster because they thought him too light for varsity play.

Art Blaker, reliable field general, and J. Trueheart, who handles any assignment capably, are the other experienced back-field men now that Art Woodard is lost for a month with an injured shoulder.

Sophs Brighten Outlook.

The brightest part of the ball-carrying picture is disclosed, however, with consideration of the merits of Otis Bunch, sophomore triple threat from Washington and Lee High, of Clarendon, antd Al Szumigala, the 190-pound sophomore full back from Erie, Pa.

Otis, who also played at Devitt Prep, Washington, does so many things well the opposition can easily believe it is attacked by a Bunch. He is the wiry type, fast and shifty, with plenty of drive in his long legs. Weighing around 160 pounds, he runs, passes and kicks exceptionally well. He earned letters in football, basket ball and track during his prep days.

Szumigala, no mere typographical error, may be rated Public Enemy, No. 1, by the opposition. He is a tough citizen who combines speed with durability and can block and back up a line with the decisiveness of a moving van rolling down a steep grade.

Motley, now handicapped by injuries; Scruggs, even a better punter than Bryant or Bunch, and Ames, a fine defensive full back, are other sophomores due to draw plaudits from Williamsburg fans.

Ends Well Protected.

The flanks are well protected, even for such a suicide schedule, with last year's sophomore sensations, Zable and DeGutis, being pressed for varsity jobs by a new pair of sophomores, Coiner and Groettum, both products of Washington high schools.

Ranging in weight from 170 to 185 pounds, this quartet misses no tricks on either attack or defense, and each is a rugged lad capable of playing 60-minute football. Dick Groettum played at Western High and Devitt Prep in Washington, and Al Coiner was rated all-high while captain at Tech. Coiner is a vicious tackler and blocker, while Groettum is fast, heady and an expert pass collector.

Cochrane Sees Tigers on Top If Cubs Win

Feels Cards Are Through; 500,000 in Detroit Seek Tickets.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 20.—Manager Dickey Cochrane gave his Detroit Tigers a gentle flick of the whip today in anticipation of a world series against the Chicago Cubs.

"The Cubs are hot and I think they have the National League flag about won," said Mickey. "The Cardinals, I think, are just about through. Our chances? I think we can take Chicago."

Two hours after Cochrane had led his club home from an Eastern tour, on which Detroit lost eight while winning only seven, the Bengal pilot put his players through a brisk workout at Navin Field.

No More Off Days.

"There'll be no more off days this year," said Cochrane. "We've got to get down to business. We've been fooling around long enough."

Mickey isn't worried about losing the American League flag. Detroit has only to win two games out of the remaining nine to clinch the bunting and Cochrane believes Detroit will get those games in the three-game series with St. Louis this week-end. He wants to guard particularly against the danger of a letdown which might carry into the classic with disastrous results.

The fans, apparently, aren't worried about the Bengals, either. Five thousand of them gave the Bengals a royal welcome today when their train arrived, tying up traffic for blocks around the station. Things weren't any quieter out at Navin field.

Club officials estimated that 500,000 applications have been received for World Series tickets. Forty young women are working day and night shifts recording the requests and filling out cards which will tell successful applicants when to call for their ducats.

The rule is first come, first served. While 50,000 fans can be seated in the park, only 26,000 of the seats are reserved. The bleacher seats will go on sale the day of each game, beginning with the series opener October 2.

World Series preparations—which cost $55,000—are nearly complete at the park. The new bleachers will be finished within a few days and the infield has been completely resodded.

Hunter, Mistaken For Hog, Wounded

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lebanon, Va., Sept. 20.—The latest in hunting tales is being told here by friends of Bob Griffith.

Griffith and a neighbor, according to the story, both had knowledge of a groundhog's hole on the banks of the Clinch River near Cleveland.

The two men, without making their intentions known to each other, decided to hunt the animal the same morning. Griffith was creeping to the opening, on all fours, when the neighbor arrived. Seeing only the top of Griffith's hat he mistook it for a groundhog and fired his shot gun.

Griffith was brought to Lebanon Hospital, where a number of shotgun pellets were removed from his face and neck.

Nats Face A's In Twin Bill Today

THE rapidly-descending curtain on Washington's major league baseball season will pause today while the Nats engage in the first of a pair of double-headers with the Athletics.

The series will be given over to experimentation with his rookies by Manager Bucky Harris, who will station the Chattanooga infielders, Buddy Lewis and Johnny Mihalic, at third base and shortstop, respectively.

To the mound in one of the games, Harris will send Dick Lanahan, the rookie left-hander whose speed made a profound impression on Harris despite his defeat by Cleveland in his big league debut last Sunday.

Harris also is eager for another glimpse of young Henry Coppola, fast-balling young right-hander, who has been troubled with a lame arm. Coppola may replace Hadley in one of the games today.

Still on trial as an outfielder, Cecil Travis will be sent to left field in the remainder of the Nats' games, displacing Red Marion, who is worn from arduous duties during the Chattanooga season.

Lewis' presence has moved young Roberto Estallella into the background in the battle for the third base job, but Lewis, like Mihalic and Marion, is still feeling the effects of the season-long grind at Chattanooga and may give way to Estallella against left-handed pitching.

The A's, buried in eighth place, are expected to send a grist of rookie pitchers to the mound against the Nats.

Telephone Employes To Stage Golf Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 20.—The greatest influx of golfers ever to have visited Fredericksburg will try their skill over the Mannsfield Hall Country Club course tomorrow when players representing the Washington and Richmond offices of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will compete.

Seventy men are expected to take part in the contest, half of them from Richmond and the other half from Washington. There will be no match play, the entire contest being medal, and there will be prizes for the low gross and low medal score, with consolation prizes for those turning in the high gross and high medal score.

Dixie Elevens To Top Grid Program

All of Major Teams to Meet Minor Rivals in Tune-Ups.

Half Dozen Southern Conference Members Play Openers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The college football coaches, who have been peering anxiously at their 1935 varsity aspirants and trying to teach the boys what to do and how to do it, get their first chance tomorrow to observe the fruits of their labors.

With the ambitious Southern and Southwestern teams leading the way, about a dozen and a half teams of major ranking and a correspondingly large group of small colleges get their first taste of competition for 1935. There's not a sign of serious competition for the big fellows as they hold to the custom of starting off with "tune-up" games.

Texans in Opener.

Of the strong Southwest Conference group, Rice, Baylor, Southern Methodist, Texas A. & M. and Texas Christian stage a simultaneous curtain-raising, the first two playing their opening games at night. The Rice Owls, candidates for national recognition as a "major" team, open against St. Mary of Texas. Southern Methodist, famed for its "aerial circus," faces Denton Teachers. Baylor's Bears play Southwestern of Texas; the Aggies encounter Stephen F. Austin Teachers and Texas Christian meets Howard Payne.

A half dozen of the Southern Conference members start off against early season "favorite partners." Vanderbilt and Kentucky of the formerly allied Southeastern Conference join them in observing the early opening date. The Midwest, held to a later start by Big Ten regulations, and the conservative East have few games of an importance and only a couple of the leading Far Western teams see action.

Virginia Opponents.

The Virginia group, which occasionally turns out some strong, small college teams, supplies most of the opposition for the Southern Conference. Virginia faces William and Mary, Virginia Poly plays Roanoke and Virginia Military meets Hampden-Sydney. In the Carolinas the powerful Blue Devils of Duke start off with a night game at Greensboro against neighboring Wake Forest; South Carolina plays Erskine and Clemson encounters Presbyterian. Kentucky observes its usual opening engagement with Maryville and Vanderbilt playing Union University in the Southeastern openers.

The Eastern program starts with Holy Cross playing Rhode Island, Villanova meeting Penn Military and Manhattan facing Niagara in tune-up encounters. In addition, there is a minor "intersectional" clash when Alfred meets Adrian of Michigan.

Jumping to the West Coast Conference, the campaign opens with Washington State playing Linfield. The only game in the Rocky Mountain group sends Utah State against Montana State.

Fair Knightess, Hymn Pay Record $1,441 Double at Havre

Six Men Win Fortunes on $2 Bets

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Md., Sept. 20.—All records for daily double payoffs in Maryland were shattered when a $1,441.10 mutuel was displayed here this afternoon. Six men, who admitted they had no reason to believe that today was their lucky day, stepped up to the window in the mutuel department and tried to look natural while they collected the fortunes for $2 wagers.

Although figures involving four numbers have often been posted opposite the names of possible winners in the double, until today the record was that of $720 paid at Pimlico last May 4.

The winning combination was that of numbers 3 and 1, and translated into horses, was Fair Knightess, in the first race, and Hymn in the third. They were a pair of longshots in their own right, paying $62.50 and $43.70 for individual wagers.

Tip From Hitch-hiker.

Nearby Pennsylvania drew most of the double winnings. Joseph H. Schmidt and Joe Keenan, from Philadelphia, each had a ticket and said they had been given the horses by a hitch-hiker, who appeared to be a stableman. They had given him a lift from Wilmington to the track.

Abraham Fox, also of Philadelphia, said he had put in 50 cents with three friends, Edward G. Stockler, of Drexel Hill, Pa., took great pride in the fact that he picked the two horses. The two others, a jolly fat man and a well-dressed young fellow, refused to give their names.

The three Philadelphians took checks for their money, but Stockler said, "I want to feel it," and accepted the bills. The two "unknowns" also went in for cash.

Two Higher Pay-Offs.

In addition to the winning combination, there were two higher pay-offs displayed among the possibilities. Had At Dust won the third race, holders of that ticket would have collected $2,882.30, while a victory for Surry would have meant $8,646.90 for a single ticket holder.

No one played the combination of Grand Knightess and Callitday, the horse that finished second in the third race and might have won but for running wide at the stretch turn. A win for Callitday would have caused much figuring in the mutuel department.

Under the rules, the pool would have been treated as a separate race, with all those having tickets involving either of the winners being paid in ratio to the amount of money bet on the other 21 horses involved in the two races.

Flying Dere Wins.

The program was featureless, with the fifth race, over the 11-6-mile course, the best of the day. Flying Dere, the property of Frank Hayes, mayor of Waterbury, Conn., won in a driving finish with Wandrel and Behomoth closest. Atmosphere, the favorite, failed to be a threat. Flying Dere paid $11.20.

The mutuel board sagged with large numbers at the conclusion of the first race, Fair Knightess, a little regarded daughter of Bright Knight, had the nerve and speed to hop out in front of a field of maiden sprinters and stay there throughout the running. Behind her, but not at threatening distance, came Gold Seeker and Reminding. Fair Knightess was responsible for an across-the-board pay-off of $65.20, $32 and $31.30—and I mean cash.

Vanda Cerulea, a notorious quitter, not only failed to quit today, but actually came frome behind to win going away from Ado and Mighty Atom in the seond sprint of the day. Masterfully ridden by Jockey Cecil Coffman, the daughter of Blue Larkspur led from start to finish in a field of 14 to pay $16.70.

Ridden by D. C. Boy.

Hymn ran a good race in completing the record double. Freddie Faust, a Washington boy, did the riding and he brought Hymn up with a rush to take the lead. Callitaday and In Front did the chief chasing in the final furlong.

Belle Grier, at a $10 mutuel, took the fourth race from Mah Grant and Credulous. Jockey Howell rode his first winner of the meeting on the filly.

The favorite players salvaged only the last race of the day. Darkling was the winner at $4.70.

Allegany High Coach Sees Improved Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 20.—Bert Harbert, Alleghany High coach, asserts the 1935 Blue and White football team will be a big improvement over last year's outfit, as far as the top 15 members of the present squad of 40 players are concerned.

The A. H. S. mentor is building his team around eight holdovers of the 1934 squad, namely, Allan Twigg, Gibbs, Haller, Guilford, Dela Grange and Bowersox, linemen, and Lloyd Boor and Frank Jordano, backs, and judging from the showing made by the squad in practice sessions, Harbert believes his 1935 eleven will be a smoother working team than his first aggregation at the Campobello institution.

FAIR KNIGHTESS, quick to get going, sprinted into an easy lead soon after the start, saved ground after opening up a safe lead and held sway for the entire trip. GOLD SEEKER, hustled hard on the inside to reach a contending position, swung to the outside for the final drive and closed gamely. REMINDING bettered her position steadily, but swung very wide into the home stretch. She closed willingly. TEHANI raced well placed, lost some ground at the stretch turn, then tired in the final drive. PRINCESS GLADYS was under strong pressure while holding to a forward position, but failed to rally at the end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VANDA CERULEA, $16.70, $7.80, $6.10; ADO, $9.90, $8.50; MIGHTY ATOM, $4.20.

VANDA CERULEA, away in the first flight and rated under slight reserve while setting the pace, made a wide turn into the home stretch when put to a drive, but continued gamely and just lasted to withstand ADO. The latter, hard ridden from the start, responded readily for the closing drive after coming up on the inside of the winner and fought it out stoutly. MIGHTY ATOM, in tight quarters on the back stretch, secured racing room on the inside when bettering his position, but hung during the closing furlong when reaching the leaders. ADAMS EVE made a bold effort, but could not improve her position.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; placed driving. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:28. Winner, Starmount Stable's br. f. (2), by Royal Minstrel—Resplendent. Trained by J. M. Millburn. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HYMN, $43.70, $15.60, $7.50; CALLITADAY, $92.00, $27.60; IN FRONT $4.50.

HYMN, sluggish in settling into her best stride, went into a contending position when leaving the back stretch, came wide into the home stretch, but closed fast and came out after displacing the leaders in the final sixteenth-mile. CALLITADAY was rushed vigorously from the start to gain a slight lead, saved ground, but had nothing left when the final test came. IN FRONT was stoutly ridden to outfoot MASKED GAL in the furlong, lost command midway of the turn, but continued tenaciously when put to a hard drive. SURRY went in the thick of contention, but weakened nearing the end. MERRIWEATHER had a lot taken out of him to gain a prominent position in the first half-mile and he tired.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates for all but Tartan Betsy. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:07½. Winner, O. Blank's ch. f. (4), by John P. Grier—Mirabelle. Trained by P. E. Fitzgerald. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELLE GRIER, $10.00, $5.40, $3.40; MAH GRANT, $5.30, $3.90; CREDULOUS, $3.80.

BELLE GRIER, favored by improved handling and steadied close to the leaders early, went around her company to assume command entering the home stretch, moved clear when straightened into the home stretch and held MAH GRANT safe thereafter. MAH GRANT, under strong pressure after gaining a slight lead while racing on the outside, took CREDULOUS and PANCOAST, but could not resist the winner and was driving hard to withstand CREDULOUS. The latter, saved behind the leaders for the first five furlongs, came in determined fashion when put to a hard drive. TIDDLEWINK was under severe pressure to maintain a forward position, but weakened in the stretch drive.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:37½. Winner, F. Hayes' b. m. (5), by Flying Ebony—Muriel Von Der. Trained by P. E. Fitzgerald. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:49 4-5, 1:15 3-5, 1:41 1-5, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING DERE, $11.20, $5.30, $4.10; WANDREL, $9.20, $5.60; BEHEMOTH, $3.60.

FLYING DERE, showing considerable improvement and racing closer to the pace than usual, displaced ATMOSPHERE when reaching the home stretch, then withstanding a tedious drive outstayed WANDREL. The latter ran up on the inside, saved running, secured racing room on the inside of the leaders when slipping through at the stretch turn and finished in bold fashion. BEHEMOTH, reserved off the pace for six furlongs, challenged strongly midway of the final turn, but hung after getting on even terms with the leaders in the closing furlong. ATMOSPHERE had good speed while holding a slight lead in the first seven furlongs, but could not stay when the real test came. CALORIC and ABSTAIN were unable to improve their positions.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:10. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH CHAIR, $8.10, $5.60, $4.80; DALMATIA, $10.20, $8.40; VERITAS, $16.60.

HIGH CHAIR improved his position steadily after reaching the back stretch, went to the leaders with a rush when advancing into the home stretch, but had to be shaken up at the end. DALMATIA, saved back of the leaders until leaving the back stretch, sprinted into a clear lead, then came again nearing the end after being overtaken. VERITAS went forwardly under weak handling and raced in spots. RED LABEL made repeated bids in the last half-mile, but was not good enough. TIGHT WAD worked his way up gradually, but could not threaten in the closing drive. CANIMAR, far out of early contention, finished with a belated rush.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:41. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARKLING, $4.70, $3.50, $2.50; TIEMPA, $5.00, $4.60; DONNA DULCIN, $4.50.

DARKLING, racing as if much the best, was blocked when attempting to come through on the inside leaving the back stretch, recovered after being eased back, was blocked again midway of the home stretch, but closed stoutly after coming to the outside of the winner in the last sixteenth. TIEMPO took command immediately was rated nicely while saving ground, then swerved out all during the closing furlong when under a stout drive. DONNA DULCIN went well placed and held on with good courage in the final furlong. WISE ADVOCATE bolted to the outside when the start came, went into contention after reaching the back stretch, but failed to rally in the closing drive. TRIOLET could not menace during the late stages.

Wheat Prices Drop Sharply On Peace Talk

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Jolted by a widely circulated rumor Mussolini had postponed for three weeks a final decision regarding Ethiopia, wheat prices collapsed 2½ cents today, but rallied.

With late indications that the rumor had little, if any basis, renewed speculative demand for wheat developed, and there was also fairly good buying believed to be for domestic millers. Drought damage advices from Argentina were unabated.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to 1⅛ cents lower, December 1.00⅛@1.00¼; corn, ¾ off to ¾ up, December, 58½@58⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ lower, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to a rise of 22 cents.

Breaks in wheat prices here came after a brief display of strength that resulted from unexpected sharp early upturns of Liverpool quotations to above the dollar-a-bushel mark and to the highest point reached in Liverpool for several years. Heavy selling, however, soon developed, and values here tumbled fast, within an abrupt reaction also at Liverpool.

In some quarters, the rumors of postponement of war moves were said to be the result merely of joking remarks among brokers that the war would be postponed to allow more general attendance at the world series baseball games.

Much of the late buying that rallied the wheat market was credited to a widely-known speculator. Gossip had it that on the break in prices he added heavily to his holdings. The previous heavy selling that accompanied the transient tumble of values was largely from commission houses with Eastern connections.

Corn, oats and rye largely took their cue from the action of wheat. Corn was relatively firm owing in part to indications of frost. A feature was considerable buying of corn against simultaneous selling of wheat.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to upturns of hog values.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—For the first time in more than a year, the figure "$1" flickered and went out today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange trading board—the screen which reflects the price the farmer receives for his wheat.

One dollar was paid for the May future at the session's opening, but thereafter prices reacted to a world-wide recession. Values at the close were ½ to ⅝ lower, October at 94⅞, December at 95⅝, and May, 99¼ cents.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The Argentine wheat crop has been cut so severely by drought this year that there will be virtually no surplus for export to Europe, said a survey today of the Royal Bank of Canada.

British Group Urges Sharing Of the Empire

Nation's Imperial Record Criticized in Light of Stand Against Italy.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 20.—Magnanmions proposals to give away or share with other nations parts of the British empire are getting a thorough airing in this country.

The Italo-Ethiopian crisis has started this talk. Foreign observers marvel at finding the English themselves criticizing their imperial record so harshly and even suggesting the voluntary surrender of their own possessions fer an ideal—world peace.

Even the nationalist opinion which exists in England joins the advocates of a redistribution of the empire in pointing out Britannia didn't keep her skirts so clean when she staked out possessions encircling the globe. Their thesis is that, for this reason, Britain should mind its own business if Mussolini wants to copy Britain's historical methods in Ethiopia.

Papers Urge Scheme.

Strong liberal sentiment for a sharing of Britain's colonies with Italy and Germany is revealed by the fact that the two outstanding Liberal newspapers, the Manchester Guardian and the London News-Chronicle, favor the scheme. Their argument is that England, because of its own colonial record, should make amends by letting the nations which demand colonies for their growing populations move into British territories.

David Lloyd George, leader of his own little Liberal group and "new deal" champion, has joined in the pastime of deploring the methods England used in building its empire. Addressing a meeting of Laborites, he reminded them that he had "fought by their side" in opposing the Boer War.

Speaking of Mussolini's ambitions in Ethiopia, Sir Alfred Sharpe, former British commissioner for Central Africa and former governor of Nyasaland, asks: "What should we have thought if Italy or any other continental power had tried to interfere with us when we occupied what is now Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Kenya and Uganda?"

Other soiled pages of English history are being dug up. An article in one of the London newspapers, recounting how England obtained control of the Suez Canal, says "The secrecy which surrounded the British government's original purchase of its holdings is a thing of the past and is no longer called for."

Would Scrap League.

Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail, which wants the League of Nations scrapped and Italy given a free hand in Ethiopia, says Britain should recognize Italy's need for expansion.

"Britain has vast possessions overseas through which she has become a great and rich nation," it says. "If only for that reason she should be the last to object when other peoples reach out to acquire overseas territories."

"Are we to keep up permanently an attitude of hostility to the 'have not' states" the Mail asks. "The two conspicuously 'have-not,' peoples in Europe today, Germany and Italy, are two of the most formidably armed nations in the world. If that is to be our course, we fear that it makes war inevitable."

'Pershing Oaks' Honor General's 75th Birthday

Verdun, France (AP).—French towns liberated by the A. E. F. plan to plant "Pershing oaks" in honor of the general's seventy-fifth birthday, which falls on September 13.

The minister of war, Col. Jean Fabry, a personal friend of Pershing, is helping to make the movement a success. French veterans living in the villages will do the planting.

Among the communities to have these memorial trees are Cantigny, St. Mihiel, Belleau, Chateau-Thierry, Montfaucon, Montsec, Thiaucourt, Bony, Fere-en-Tardenois, Fismes and Chatel Chebery, where Sergt. Alvin T. York captured 132 Germans.

King Buys Old Cup.

Stockholm (AP).—From a Russian collection of antiques sold in Paris, King Gustaf has acquired for the Swedish government museum a silver cup in the bottom of which is set a royal medal bearing the insignia of Charles XI of Sweden. He died in 1797.

Nazis in Argentina.

Buenos Aires (AP).—Nazi Germany, trying to rebuild its slumping trade in South America, has started a brisk propaganda campaign. Guest trips for newspapermen on the Graf Zeppelin and numerous advertising posters are the chief external manifestations of the drive.

Historic Building Razed.

Newburyport, Mass. (U.P.).—The building in which President John Quincy Adams, Rufus King and Robert Treat Paine, the younger, studied law as pupils of Theophilus Parsons, one-time chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, will be razed soon to make way for a modern chapel.

Corn Measures 13 Feet.

Lamar, Mo. (U.P.).—Barton Countians are talking about "out where the tall corn grows" and they don't mean Iowa. They refer to the Irwin neighborhood where John Coons has a field in which some stalks measure 13 feet.

Old Mine Area Booms.

Dos Cabezas, Ariz. (U.P.).—This mining region where gold was discovered prior to the Civil War, and where wildcat companies sold millions of dollars worth of metal "still in the ground," is staging a comeback. Five companies are taking ore from the district.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

STRANGE as it seems, the greatest earthquake in United States history—in fact, the only first-degree earthquake this Nation ever had—was a terrific shake more than a century ago that centered around the frontier town of New Madrid, Mo. This quake does not occupy much of a place in any list of disasters because it affected a then sparsely populated area. However, experts agree that any city on the spot would have been utterly destroyed.

The quake occurred in late 1811 and early 1812, beginning in the middle of December and shaking continuously until the middle of February. Shocks were felt over an area of 12,000 square miles. It was one of the very few known cases where an area quaked continuously for months.

The water in the Mississippi River rose six to eight feet in places, then dropped below its former level. In many sections, the entire course of the river was changed. In spite of the fact that the earthquake took place in mid-winter, the weather was oppressively hot at the time.

California, well known for its minor temblors, has never had a quake that approached this one in severity. The quake of 1933 in Long Beach, though it wrought much damage, was not a major shock, according to the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Wanderbirds Slated to Take Maryland Hike

7-Mile Ramble in Region of Little Paint Branch Set for Sunday.

By Robert Shosteck.

This Sunday the Wanderbirds turn eastward for a seven-mile ramble through the region surrounding Little Paint Branch, between Ammendale and Laurel, Md. This jaunt offers such variety as shaded woodland roads, some abandoned for years, an old distillery dating to pre-prohibition days, numerous springs and fine scenery on the trail along Little Paint Branch.

If you are looking for a change from your daily routine, meet with the Wanderbirds at 9:45 a. m. in front of The Post Building. Buses will be there to take us to Ammendale, on the Baltimore boulevard, the starting point of this trip. The round-trip fare will be 65 cents and reservations must be made in advance at NA. 4200. Bring along a cup for water, and lunch, and come early enough to buy your tickets at The Post counter. We leave promptly at 10 a. m.

At Ammendale we take the road leading to the Christian Brothers College, and turn into a woods road through the ground of this institution. There are a number of roadside shrines of the Holy Virgin, where those so disposed may render devotion. We again reach the county road, which we follow to a branch of Beaver Dam Creek. The trail follows this stream a short distance and then crosses a meadow to a road leading to Edgewood School. Our trail now leads downhill into the beautiful Little Paint Branch Valley. A fine spring, where we stop for lunch, is reached by a short detour uphill to the left.

The trail again leads into the valley and this time we follow old roads and wide paths, passing several springs en route. We also pass the remains of a large distillery, which Dr. Stokes, the hike leader, visited in prohibition days when it was in operation. Not far from the point where the run divides the hikers turn right and uphill, and follow dirt roads and a path to the house of the forest warden. Here the group will stop for a rest and may have an opportunity to visit the warden.

The Wanderbirds now follow a trail directly to the Furnace road, turning off to the trail along Bear Branch. About 1 mile from the boulevard we turn uphill to Cherry lane, where the buses await us. The group should return to the city about 6:30 or 7 o'clock.

Hikers and nature-lovers are invited to a series of nature-guide walks to be conducted by the Park Service five days a week at 2 and 2:30 p. m. These trips offer one an opportunity to become better acquainted with the flowers, birds and trees of the region, as well as to enjoy a short hike. The trip on September 22 begins at the Sixteenth street reservoir, while those of September 25 to 29, inclusive, begin at Stop 30 on the Glen Echo carline.

The Potomac Appalachian Trails Club announces a trip to the Catoctin Range on September 22. The area is particularly scenic and is a public preserve. Egbert H. Walker, phone Cleveland 5475, will lead this trip.

Our publisher definitely assures us of a good supply of the "Potomac Trail Book" by Saturday. Bring your half-dollar with you on Sunday and get a copy of this hiker's and naturalist's guide (autographed if you wish). We are still waiting for a good number of hikers' questionnaries which have not yet been returned to The Post. We hope to announce the results in a week or so, with your co-operation.

Fergus, Ontario (U.P.).—John Avery, 60-year-old, battle-scarred war veteran and globe trotter, "hitch hiked" more than 1,000 miles from St. John, N. B., to attend the unveiling of a war memorial.

RELINE & RELAX with TRIPLEWEAR

For SAFE BRAKES

FRANK LEACH
OWNER-MANAGER

Frank Leach's SAFETY PLEDGE

In the interest of public safety, to prevent accidents and make the streets and highways safe I pledge myself to continue to use the finest quality brake lining material, the best equipment obtainable and personally supervise the work done by mechanics employed by me in servicing the brakes of Washington Motorists.

UP TO A STANDARD ... NOT DOWN TO A PRICE

Safe Brakes are too important to public safety to sacrifice quality material in order to reline brakes at a few cents cheaper price. Because of the great volume of business we do and with our scientific equipment we are able to reduce prices but not at the expense of cheaper materials. We use only the best materials and refuse to reduce prices at the expense of public safety.
